Military Marchers Honor Heroic Dead; Antograph Seekers Rush Singer Ross

Byrd at Gettysburg

SENATOR BYRD, of Virginia, the first Southerner to deliver a memorial address at Gettysburg declared that while sectional antagonisms have been overcome, the country now faces class animosities. Page 2.

Congress Pauses

". . . that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain . . ."

From the words of Abraham Lincoln came the theme for Memorial Day yesterday as Washington joined the Nation with prayer and song, oratory and martial music in tribute to the fallen heroes of many battlefields.

In the halls of Congress and from the marble rostrum of a sun-bathed amphitheater, statesmen pleaded for peace and good will among the peoples of all nations, while the green slopes of Arlington National Cemetery echoed to the notes of buglers' "taps."

Crowd Exceeds Expectations

Through throngs of patriotic citizens along Constitution avenue moved a mighty display of military strength, embodying units of past and present. It was the first Memorial Day parade in three years for Washington and the town turned out in greater numbers than authorities anticipated.

Cheer followed cheer as marching columns of soldiers, sailors, marines and veterans tramped smartly to the strains of 11 bands and drum corps. The line of march was headed by Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown, with Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, commander of the District National Guard, as grand marshal.

25,000 Watch Parade

For nearly an hour, the marching units passed in review before high-ranking service and civic leaders. Veterans of past conflicts stepped with crack outfits of the regular service and music by the Army, Navy and Marine Bands was interspersed with marching tunes by drum and bugle corps of veteran organizations. It was estimated that 25,000 persons watched.

Highlights of the day's observances was the traditional military and civilian tribute to the Nation's dead in Arlington Cemetery. Sharing the spotlight at services in the Amphitheater sponsored by the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation were Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, and Lanny Ross, radio singer.

More than 3,000 bare-headed spectators braved a blistering sun to witness the ceremonies.

Taft Pleads for Peace

Warning against the consequences of another world conflict, Senator Taft reminded his listeners of past war horrors and pleaded for concerted efforts to preserve peace.

Senator Taft said:

"In other parts of the world the drumbeats of war are throbbing again. Many nations of the world are arming to an extent beyond our wildest imagination of a few years ago. New engines of destruction are being devised and new uses are being found for old instruments of death. Those who went through the World War do not need to be reminded of its utter horror—and I believe we can stay out of war if we are determined to do so."

The ceremonies also included remarks by James G. Yaden, president of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, and John M. Kline, department commander of the G. A. R.; selections by the Marine Band and Fort Stevens Drum and Bugle Corps, American Legion, and read-

Death Toll 308 As Nation Marks Memorial Day

By the Associated Press.

Memorial Day brought its customary budget of violent death yesterday, augmented by the four-day "week-end" from Saturday through Tuesday.

Forty-one States and the District of Columbia reported 175 automobile fatalities and 68 drownings. Air crashes, shootings and miscellaneous forms of accidents raised the total of death to 308.

Last year, on the three-day holiday, upward of 250 were killed.

New York had 19 motor deaths, and 32 violent deaths in all; 13 were killed by automobiles in Ohio; 16 in California; and 9 each in Illinois and New Jersey.

At least 8 persons were shot to death, two in Kentucky.

Tri-Power Parleys Basis Of British Pact

Plan Offered Soviets Pledges Conferences For Mutual Defense

By the United Press.

London, May 30.—The defensive military alliance which Great Britain has submitted to Soviet Russia, with French approval, provides for tripower consultation in event aggression threatens anywhere in Europe, the official text of the proposed pact revealed tonight.

The United Press obtained access to the British text of the proposed treaty which Moscow has been asked to approve, and is able to reveal the basis laid down for revival of the Anglo-French-Russian triple entente of 1914 as a means of bolstering the European "peace front."

Paris Is Optimistic

(Paris dispatches said the French press published reports today that the Soviet government had decided to accept the Anglo-French proposal. The French foreign office, however, said it had received no official reply from Moscow. The Soviet government was silent.

(The French do not expect a definite statement concerning Russian adherence in Premier Molotoff's address to the Supreme Soviet tomorrow, but French Foreign Minister Bonnet, who received an outline of the speech from the Russian Ambassador to Paris today, was pic-

Loyalists' Spy Hunter Must Die For 800 Murders

Madrid, May 30 (AP).—Convicted of 800 murders in Madrid, 21-year-old Jose Delalamo Galilia was condemned today by a military tribunal at Santander to death by the garrote.

Delalamo Galilia, with ten other youths, was accused of establishing an "investigation brigade" allegedly responsible for the arrest of 3,500 Nationalist sympathizers.

Only Congress To See Royalty At Capitol

Building Will Be Locked For Reception Against Even Veteran Employes

By Robert C. Albright.

A Capitol tightly locked against all except Their Majesties, Senators, Representatives and a few chosen members of the press will await the June 9 Congressional visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Even old line employes and committee clerks will be barred from the building during the 45-minute reception in the Capitol rotunda, it was decided yesterday by a joint Senatorial and House committee on arrangements.

Carpet For Stone Floor

Designed to facilitate without hitch the Royal couple's greeting to each of the 96 Senators and 435 House members in the short time space allotted, and as a protective precaution, the decision to close the Capitol was the first of its kind in the memory of the oldest member.

Met at the foot of the main East Capitol steps promptly at 11 a. m. by a Congressional receiving committee of eight, Their Majesties will be escorted up the tall stone steps to the chairless rotunda, where they will take their places near the entrance beneath the painting of Pocahontas.

Members of the Senate and House will be there awaiting them, all standing, and attired in morning dress. A carpet will cover the rough stone floor, but there will be no dais or raised platform for the King and Queen. The high steps they will climb to the entrance will be uncovered.

Committee to Do Honors

Thirty newspapermen, selected by the Standing Committee of Correspondents, the only "outsiders" admitted to the building, will stand in a little group at the House corridor entrance to the rotunda. To their left and in front of them will be members of the Senate, and to

Shaw Wins at Indianapolis; 16,000 See Nats Split Twin Bill

AUTO RACING—Wilbur Shaw, veteran auto race driver, won the 500-mile Indianapolis race after Floyd Roberts, Van Nuys, Calif., driver, was killed in a three-way crash which brought injury to two other drivers and two woman spectators. Shaw's average speed was 115.035 miles per hour, under the record.

BASEBALL—Washington's Nationals divided a double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics, handing the first one to the A's, 3-1, despite Alex Alexandra's four-hit pitching, and taking the second, 8-4, before 16,000 fans. Largest crowd of the day—and the year—58,296 fans—turned out in New York to see the Brooklyn Dodgers split a double-header with the New York Giants, 4-5, 3-1.

SHAW

HORSE RACING—Charles Town rack track entertained its largest attendance—15,000 fans—as the Decoration Day Handicap ended in a photo finish with E. K. Hillman's Star Mint nosing out E. Johnson's Dun Lucky by a whisker. Townsend B. Martin's Cravat won the $25,000 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park.

TRACK—Glenn Cunningham, running an exhibition mile in the District A. A. U. meet at College Park, Md., set a new stadium record.

SAILING RACES—Dr Albert E. Pagan piloted his 20-foot Kan Doo to victory in the fifth annual Gunston Cove-Alexandria sailing race.

King Says Canada Holds Key to Peace

(The King's Text—page 9)

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Victoria, British Columbia, May 30.—King George prophesied today that Canada would play an important role as mediator in bringing about an understanding between East and West.

In a Canadian-American broadcast, which was relayed over the world via short wave, the British sovereign predicted that "as science reduces the barriers of space, this country (Canada) will become a thoroughfare between two hemispheres."

Declaring that some day the world will realize that "prosperity lies in co-operation and not in conflict," the King said, "I look to Canada playing an increasingly important part in furthering friendly relations between the East and West."

Best-Delivered Speech

Because British Columbia, no less than California, has been much concerned over Japanese expansion to the east, special significance was attached to the King's prophecy here.

George, in his fourth and best-delivered speech since his arrival in Canada, also foresaw a second role for his North American dominion—that of developing its far northern reaches.

"You have only touched the fringes of the great North," he maintained.

"There in the North is a field of enterprise for youth which it will take generations to exhaust. I could only wish that it had been possible for me to make a trip into that region which holds so much of Canada's future."

Cheer Their Every Move

"Most English" of Canadian cities, Victoria took the day off today to cheer every move of Their Majesties. In this beautiful island capital of British Columbia, named after the King's great grandmother, the British sovereigns received a welcome that can only be described as ecstatic. A large part of the population includes hundreds of retired officers who served in the British forces throughout the world.

Throngs here were not content with singing "God Save the King" at this morning's ceremony before Parliament. They continued to hum and whistle the anthem all day long. Every poet or would-be-poet in the capital has bombarded the local editors with odes to the King and Queen.

Despite the numerable activities prepared for them here, Their Majesties took time to receive a sample of the reception that awaits them in the District of Columbia.

Looking out of their windows in the royal suite across the Strait of Juan de Fuca, they saw fireworks bursting above Port Angeles, an American town 20 miles away in the State of Washington, which joined Victoria in the celebration. The

Farley Reaches 51, Silent on 1940 Party Nominee

By the Associated Press.

Genial "Jim" Farley was 51 years old yesterday and though surrounded by speculation over his political aims, has not climbed out on any limb in regard to the 1940 Presidential campaign.

Few expect the Postmaster General and Democratic national chairman to mention any wish of his own until after the President has disclosed his thoughts about 1940, for Farley's loyalty to the President has never been questioned.

Many of his friends are wondering what will be the circumstances under which he comes to his fifty-second birth anniversary a year from yesterday—just in advance of the conventions at which the standard bearers for the next campaign are chosen.

Trainman Is Hero Twice in a Day

Hiram Lyon, 50, one of two Baltimore & Ohio trainmen who saved Mrs. Elizabeth Funderburke, 22, of 1467 Irving street northwest, from a speeding freight train Sunday, was recovering yesterday from burns suffered in a second rescue the same day.

Lyon's hands were severely burned in pulling the flaming clothes off his son-in-law, Paul E. Warren, 31, 4032 Twentieth street northeast, when the gasoline with which they were cleaning tools, flared up, igniting Warren's shirt.

Bates to Force Airing of Lobby Case

Milk Quiz Head Says Reputation of House Is at Stake; Would Punish Faulkner

By James D. Secrest.

With all major District legislation, except the 1940 supply bill, thrown into jeopardy by a rift in the House District Committee resulting from the milk investigation, the Bates sub-committee yesterday prepared for a showdown in the lobbying case.

The major aim of the inquiry appeared likely to be lost in the confusion as sub-committee members indicated they might resist the efforts of Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, to punish Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg (W. Va.) postmaster, for alleged lobbying activities.

Chairman Randolph, despite his announced intention to resign at the conclusion of the milk inquiry, still stood in a key position. Before leaving Washington for West Virginia last week, he told committee members he would resist any attempt to press the Faulkner case.

May Go to Floor

Bates, whose spunky persistence has angered some of his colleagues, said he will carry the fight to the House floor if his sub-committee overrides him and insists that the case be dropped. Bates said he considers the honor of the House at stake because of Faulkner's alleged boast that he could deliver the votes of Randolph and other committee members, including Bates'.

Faulkner, the son of a former United States Senator, has been one of Randolph's major political aides in his district and has influential backing.

The showdown, scheduled for today, appeared likely to be postponed until next week due to the absence of two of the Bates sub-committee members. Chairman Randolph was due back in Washington today, but Representatives Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin were not expected to return until Monday.

While hearings may be resumed tomorrow, Bates said that the executive committee meeting will not be held until all members are present.

The House District Committee has scheduled a meeting for tomorrow, but the Schulte milk bill probably will be held up pending its author's return. Repercussions to developments of the last few days, however, are expected.

Revenue Outlook Dark

Meanwhile, the outlook for the District revenue bill and the Griffenhagen reorganization plan was dark. With other members indicating a desire to quit the committee, it appeared doubtful that the committee will act again this session with sufficient unity to report the measures.

One member, outspoken Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, suggested that the "whole damned committee' ought to be abolished, most of its duties turned over to a reorganized District gov-

Japanese Rush Troops to Outer Mongolian Border

Tokyo, May 30 (INS).—A vigorous Japanese protest was dispatched to Moscow tonight following a series of severe clashes between Japanese and Russian-trained Outer Mongolian troops, planes and river gunboats on the Manchukuoan frontier.

Although the frontiers were reported quiet tonight, it was learned the Japanese have rushed reinforcements to the area near Nomanhan, east of Lake Buir, where, on Sunday, according to Japanese, 42 planes belonging to the Outer Mongolian forces were shot down.

Reports today from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, said several Soviet gunboats were severely damaged by the fire of two Manchukuo ships in a skirmish Saturday at the junction of the Ussuri and Nor rivers.

Barrymore Suffers Heart Attack

Chicago, May 30 (INS).—John Barrymore suffered a slight heart attack tonight and the performance of "My Dear Children" in which he is appearing was canceled.

Sam Stratton, the much-married actor's publicity representative, said Barrymore's physician had assured him the actor will be able to appear in tomorrow's matinee. Barrymore was ordered to remain in bed until then, Stratton said.

Police Figure Sought in D. C. Mystery Death

Nicholas Di Blasi's Body Found in Canal; Tavern Quarrel Reported

A Washington police character was being sought early today by authorities investigating the mysterious death of a 28-year-old District real estate agent whose body was found near Brookmont, Md., early yesterday.

The dead man is Nicholas Di Blasi, 6609 Georgia avenue northwest. His body was discovered at 11:30 a. m. yesterday in a feeder canal between the Potomac River and the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, a half mile from the District line in Montgomery County.

The man sought was described to police by friends of the dead man who reported he and Di Blasi had been involved in a quarrel Sunday afternoon at a tavern near Glen Echo.

Saw Men Quarrel

A colored woman, resident of the area, also told authorities she had seen two men, one of whom was believed to have been Di Blasi, quarreling in the woods between Conduit road and the river. She said they had gotten out of a car after the machine skidded off the road and crashed down an embankment.

Di Blasi left his home in Washington at 9 p. m. Saturday after telling members of his family he was going fishing. That was the last word his mother and father had of him until they were notified that his body had been found.

Fled Tavern

From a half dozen of Di Blasi's friends who were being questioned early today at the Montgomery County police station at Bethesda, police gathered this story of events, presumed immediately to have preceded his death:

Di Blasi and the man sought were involved in a quarrel at the tavern near Glen Echo about 1 p. m. Sunday. In the quarrel, a third man suffered minor injuries which were treated at Georgetown Hospital.

Police said they believed Di Blasi and his friend feared the third man

Miss Moses Gravely Presents Flags in June Week Ceremony

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 30.—Hundreds of midshipmen and a single pretty girl shared honors today in the gear-meshed precision of the colors presentation in the Naval Academy June Week.

Miss Frances Norfleet Moses, gravely beautiful under her responsibility as the only woman officially to share in the graduation program, presented the National flag and the Naval Academy banner to Midshipman Benjamin Jarvis, captain of the First Company.

The tall, lissom brunette crossed the gigantic green stage of Worden Field on the arm of Rear Admiral Wilson Brown to receive the flags from the former color guard.

All in gold and blue herself, Miss Moses handed her huge bouquet of blue and gold blooms to an aide, and gave the flag, dramatically unfurled by the breeze of the bay, to the tall midshipman.

Jarvis and Miss Moses together conveyed the flag to the color bearer in the guard of honor. The ceremony was repeated to present the Naval Academy banner, a blue anchor on white on a solid field of navy blue.

Volcano Smoke Darkens Alaskan Town All Day

Perryville, Alaska, May 30 (AP).—Inhabitants of this Alaska Peninsula settlement had to keep their lamps lighted again today as ashes and thick sulphurous smoke from erupting Mount Veniaminof, 15 miles away, darkened the sky.

The smoke and hot ashes are forced skywards thousands of feet and at night fire can be seen plainly from here. There is an almost continuous rumbling.

President Urges Rural Homes Provide for Pigs and Garden

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 30.—President Roosevelt today suggested requiring rural home owners to build on tracts of at least two acres of ground, and said such an act by his home county would be talked about all over the East. The rest of the Nation might similarly expand its country dwellings, he said.

When there is one acre or less in a home site, the President said at a press conference, most of the ground is taken up by the house, garage, driveway and lawn. An extra acre would provide space for a cow, pigs, fruit trees and vegetable garden and might enable a family out of work to raise most of its own food.

The President, starting his return to Washington about midnight, will hold a legislative conference tomorrow morning with Vice President Garner, Senate Leader Barkley, Speaker Bankhead and House Leader Rayburn. On their reports as to the likely length of the Congressional session will depend the dates for his trip to the West Coast and Alaska.

If it appears Congress will be able to quit by July 15, the President will defer his trip until after adjournment. But if the session will run much later than mid-July, he probably will start West, via Asheville, N. C., about June 15.

After visiting the San Francisco Exposition, Mr. Roosevelt expects to go to Seattle and there board the cruiser Houston for a quick trip to Juneau, Alaska, forecast to require four-and-a-half days.

The President approved Secretary of State Hull's recent suggestions for neutrality law revision, chief among

Congress Drive Opens For Loans to Small Firms

Hearing Begins Today On Bill Providing For RFC Insurance Of Financing

Business and Labor

JOHN G. WINANT, American director of the International Labor Office, issued his first annual report in which the arms race is blamed for many difficulties of labor. Page 9.

NEW PROPOSALS designed "to take agriculture entirely out of reach of the wage-hours law" were drafted by the House farm bloc. Page 2.

Small Business Loans

Senators and Representatives, anxious to see something done to aid small business, have launched a drive to obtain enactment of legislation at this session placing a ready supply of capital funds within reach of small concerns.

Senator Mead (Democrat), New York, coauthor in the Senate of a bill providing for insurance by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of loans to small business, announced that he would do everything possible to obtain legislation at this session.

The Senate Banking Committee will open this morning a two or three-day hearing on Mead's bill. The purpose of the hearing is to give the drive momentum.

Eccles, Others to Testify

Mead has invited the following officials to testify: Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board; Ernest G. Draper, board member; Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Leon Henderson, commission member; Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC; Peter Nehemkis, jr., SEC attorney; Senators Pepper and Andrews, Florida Democrats, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, and Representatives Voorhis (Democrat), California; Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and Schwert (Democrat), New York.

Schwert has introduced in the House a bill identical with that which Mead is sponsoring in the Senate.

The proposal for RFC insurance of loans to small business is the second point in a three-way plan outlined to the monopoly committee last week by Assistant Secretary of State Adolph A. Berle, jr. In fact, Berle and Nehemkis, it is understood, assisted in drafting the Mead-Schwert bill.

Jones Regarded as Obstacle

Jones, who feels that the RFC has done an adequate job in taking care of the legitimate demands of small business for long-term loans, has been regarded as the chief obstacle in the way of the Mead-Schwert proposal as well as bills by Pepper and Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, providing for the creation of systems of banks to extend long-term credit to small enterprises.

Proponents of the insurance plan, however, believe Jones is leaning toward their idea "as the lesser of the evils."

Berle, in his appearance before the Monopoly Committee, advocated creation of a system of capital credits banks to provide small and medium-sized concerns with capital loans and the Federal and local governments with funds to construct self-liquidating and other needed projects. Insurance of small business loans, in the program outlined by him, would be merely a temporary aid.

The insurance proposal would not meet the needs of small businesses for equity financing—that is, money raised by sale of stocks.

Mead pointed out, however, that insured loans could be amortized over a ten-year period, and would bear 4 per cent interest. This contrasts, he pointed out, with the 18 to 35 per cent which small concerns sometimes have to pay.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

AN OPEN LETTER TO F. D. R.

Dear Mr. President:

I hope you and the Missus got invitations O. K. to Lady Lindsay's garden party for the King and Queen. Or didn't you rate one? But then Mrs. R. was a girlhood friend of the Lady's... I'd give six bits to see you in a gray top hat.

F. D. R.

Now, if Lady Lindsay would serve hotdogs at her garden party, would you put that on P. 1, as an old-time editor yourself?

For the last few months I've let you get along without my advice. But it hasn't done much good, has it? . . .

You've great faith in radio. Did you happen to tune in on your auto radio on your way home from your last radio broadcast? Twenty minutes after I heard your last words I was listening to the radio commentator's version. Ten highbrow columnists couldn't have "interpreted" your speech more astonishingly. It's enough to revive your faith in newspapers.

You still have 19 months of presidenting ahead of you, maybe more. If you want to take an old farmhand's advice, you'll drop passionate Andy Jackson for a while and try compassionate Abe Lincoln. You remember Lincoln was willing to buy freedom for the slaves, and it might have been cheaper in the long run . . . What was it he said about binding up the nation's wounds?

It's a pity you don't drop in at some of these parties around town occasionally to hear what they're saying. We were over at Frances Parkinson Keyes' for breakfast the other day (you know her) and I heard a Senator say he wouldn't succeed you as President for anything. (I just looked at him.)

* * * *

He said the next President will find plenty of tacks in his chair, and he'd find you as big a worry as former President as you've been as President.

He thought that if the people began to grumble under a "conservative" regime you'd egg 'em on and say, "Boys, I didn't do that to you, did I?"

* * * *

Sometimes it looks as if in this melee your knights and the nobles of the Loyal Opposition were galloping at each other with a stone wall between them. Out in my home State there are still a lot of Republicans, and I guess that's true everywhere, only down in Dixie they call 'em Democrats, and they're all rarin' to be appeased.

* * * *

You've got to reckon with 'em, and it's a mistake to make 'em feel sorry for themselves as if they were an unhappy minority of Croats or Ukranians or something . . . If anybody can pretend that 20,000,000 Republicans just don't exist that would be the best trick of any year, especially an election year.

". . . Ship of State, 1939"

But let's not get too serious. Who cares about elections, anyhow? I wonder if your son, Elliott, sends you those purple mimeographed copies of his radio talks. I get 'em regularly, and I declare I never saw a son so careful to disagree with his pappy. He talks as if he were now an adopted son of Texas.

Maybe he thinks you've done well enough so far and now he's got to worry about Elliott.

* * * *

If I were any good with a whittling knife I'd make you a fine model for your ships collection of the old Ship of State the way she looks nowadays. She'd resemble an excursion boat with all the first-class passengers on a sitdown strike, all hands demanding service and an extra ration of rum, and lots of rassling up in the rigging and people walking the plank with one eye blind-folded, trying to act scared.

* * * *

Well, things change overnight here in the Capital. Last year who could have foreseen that Congressman Martin Dies would be sniping at John Hamilton, a Republican, instead of his own fellow Democrats, Frank Murphy and Frances Perkins? Maybe your Administration will go down in history as the Era of Good Will.

Yours sincerely,

ELMER.

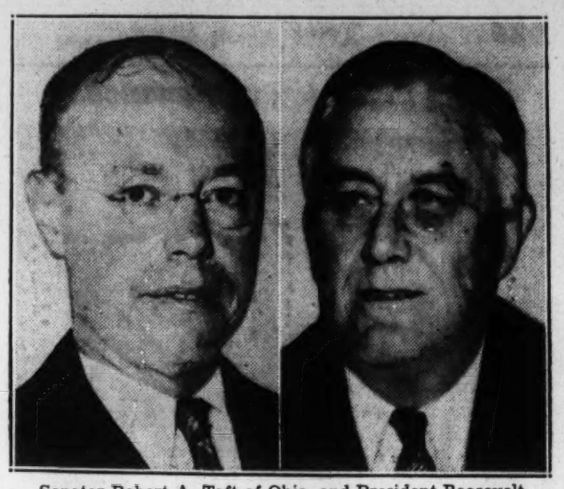
3d Dredge May Get Airport Ready For Use in Spring

A third giant dredge is expected to join the two now filling in ground for the Washington National Airport at Gravelly Point, it was learned yesterday. With the additional assistance it is expected the airport will be ready for use next spring.

Sand and gravel are being dumped into the field at 1,850,000 cubic yards a month. With another dredge the total will climb toward 3,000,000.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment Evenly Divided in 'Trial Heat' Poll Between Roosevelt and Senator Taft



Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and President Roosevelt

New York, May 30.—If Senator Robert A Taft of Ohio were the Republican candidate for President against Franklin D. Roosevelt running for a third term, voting sentiment at this itme would be evenly divided between the two candidates, according to tests made throughout the country by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In a "trial heat" between the two men, the Institute asked a cross-section of voters of both parties:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term in 1940 on the Democratic ticket against Senator Robert Taft on the Republican ticket, which one would you prefer?"

Among those expressing an opinion, the vote was:

Roosevelt	50%
Taft	50

Approximately one person in every six (16 per cent) said he had no opinion.

The survey was the second in which Roosevelt's third-term popularity has been tested in relation to a specific Republican opponent. Several wee' ago the Institute ran a trial heat between Roosevelt and Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

A preference for Dewey was expressed by 55 per cent of voters with opinions, against 45 per cent for Roosevelt. Thus, on the basis of present-day sentiment, a Roosevelt ticket would run a better race against Senator Taft than against Dewey. These measurements of sentiment are, of course, merely tests in a hypothetical race and, with the campaign still more than a year off, opinion can easily change.

Many Shifts Indicated

The even division of sentiment between Roosevelt and Taft is brought about mainly because a large bloc of voters who were for Roosevelt in 1936 say they would switch parties to vote for Taft. Their chief reason, judging by the comments they make, appears to be opposition to a third term. The party division follows:

	Favor Roosevelt	Favor Taft.
1936 Roosevelt Voters	75%	25%
1936 Landon Voters	6	94

In explaining their reasons for favoring Taft, the largest group of voters say they are against a third term, and the second reason given is "loyalty to the Republican Party." Others declare that the country "needs a change," that they favor "anybody but Roosevelt," and that they oppose "too much government spending."

Those who favor Roosevelt for another term say they think "he has done a good job," that they want to "stick by the Democratic Party," and that Senator Taft is "inexperienced."

'Trial Heats' to Date

The American Institute of Public Opinion is running a series of "trial heats" between leading potential candidates for 1940 in the two major parties. Following is a summary of the findings reported to date:

Byrd Sees Class Hatreds As Nation's Chief Menace

By the Associated Press.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30.—Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, the first Southerner to deliver the Memorial Day address on this Civil War battleground, declared today that sectional hatreds between the States had been replaced by new class animosities.

The Nation's unity, he said in a prepared address, is threatened by "racial and religious prejudice and envy, hatred and jealousy between those who have accumulated property and those who have not."

"What will it accomplish us," Byrd asked, "to achieve sectional unity, only to be divided by economic dissension?

"What will it profit us to rejoice that the unity of States is strong, if sappers and miners are permitted to work underground to weaken the very foundation of our system of constitutional democracy?"

Contending that the Nation needed "not more Federal Government but better local government" Byrd urged his hearers to "resist the trend of Federal centralization."

"A liberal and democratic government does not mean being liberal with other people's government," he said. "Among other things, true liberalism in America means preserving and protecting from attack from any source whatsoever the immortal principle that our Government was established in three branches—the judicial, the legislative, the executive—free of coercion or control, one from the other.

"Only a government financially solvent is a government founded upon the liberalism of democracy. The preservation of fiscal solvency capable and strong enough to meet any great national crisis is an obligation inherent upon those who wish the generations to come to enjoy the same freedom we have today.

"The maintenance of law and order under all conditions; the preservation of the principle of the sanctity of private property from mob possession are the basis of every form of liberal democracy; in fact, of any form of constitutional government.

"Private enterprise, and not the Government, must provide employment for our citizens. It is a foundation stone upon which our democracy is founded. When private enterprise fails, then representative democracy fails.

"Here it will not fail unless taxation becomes confiscatory; unless Government regulation becomes too oppressive; unless Government competition with private business becomes too restrictive.

New Wage Law Exemption for Farms Drawn

Labor Committee to Get Agriculture Bloc Proposals Tomorrow

New proposals designed "to take agriculture entirely out of reach of the wage-hour law" have been drafted by the powerful House farm bloc and will be presented at a crucial meeting of the Labor Committee tomorrow.

Passage of the Norton bill to relieve wage-hours law "hardship cases" may depend on whether or not Mrs. Norton, chairman of the committee, can reach an understanding in tomorrow's committee meeting with Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, proponent of complete agricultural exemptions.

The Norton bill, as it now stands, contains no reference to agriculture whatsoever. Mrs. Norton has said she intends to ask the House to suspend its rules to consider the bill Monday; but if the measure is presented to the House without agricultural provisions, it may suffer the same fate as a previous wage-hour bill that failed to satisfy the farm bloc. That bill has been, to all intents and purposes, pigeon holed.

Exemptions Provided

Nevertheless, Mrs. Norton said yesterday that even if the committee proves unable to agree on the agricultural exemptions, "I see no reason why the House should turn down the other exemptions aimed to take care of hardship cases."

Mrs. Norton's bill would exempt from the provisions of the law, in whole or in part, rural telephone operators, employes earning $200 a month or more, telegraph messengers, rural home workers, and, temporarily at least, workers in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

One of the principal points of contention between farm bloc leaders and other members of the committee is the exemption of canneries from the wage provisions of the law. Charging that a lobby has been operating "in the interests of the canneries," Mrs. Norton said yesterday she was "unalterably opposed" to exemption of canneries.

Farm members, however, have said they would insist on exemption of "small undercapitalized canneries." The bloc is also attempting to "clarify" phrases in the earlier bill that had aroused some farm opposition because of "obscurity."

Pershing Leaves Today for Annual Tour in France

Gen. John J. Pershing leaves this morning for his annual pilgrimage of the battle grounds of France.

The A. E. F. commander will sail from New York aboard the S. S. Manhattan, accompanied by his orderly and companion of many years. Master Sergt. Crawford Shafer. He expects to make his headquarters in Paris, with trips from time to time to the cemeteries and monuments to the American war dead. An aide said yesterday he probably would remain until November.

'Camp Butterflies' Ruled Out by Marine Reserves

In order to discourage "camp butterflies," men without previous military experience will not be enlisted after tonight, Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, commanding the Fifth Battalion, Marine Corps Reserve, announced yesterday.

Hereafter the recruiting office at 458 Indiana avenue northwest will accept only those with previous training who are able to convince the commander that they will stick with the battalion.

The battalion will go under canvas at Quantico July 30.

DAREN'T START DRY

EVEN if this is the camel that holds all records for going-without-more-drink, how long could he last if he had to start dry? Your car and your engine oil can't last either if you keep starting dry this Summer. But how can you help it?

You can't . . . not with any of these oils that are always in a rush to drain down to the crankcase completely.

You certainly can help it though, by getting your engine OIL-PLATED.

NEVER all down in the crankcase, no matter how long or how often you park your car, OIL-PLATING is lastingly close-knit to every inner engine surface by the action of Conoco Germ Processed oil. Patented Germ Processing creates the strong "power of attraction" that fastens non-detachable OIL-PLATING throughout your engine. Does chrome-plating drain down at a standstill? Neither does OIL-PLATING. Therefore actually in advance of starting, OIL-PLATING is ready to slide every working part into easy motion, without rasping dryness. And since OIL-PLATING doesn't fly off or fry up it helps your engine to shatter the record for going-without-more oil. That's why you want to OIL-PLATE today with Germ Processed oil, at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

1,700 of Press Guests Tonight With President

Paid Entertainment Omitted so Reporters Can Amuse Selves

News gathering in the Capital, ordinarily a 24-hour, 365-day business, will hit the year's lowest level of activity tonight when reporters forsake their usual haunts and attend the biggest, gayest and most informal party of the season, the White House press reception.

Garbed in all varieties of evening—and daytime—dress excluding only the extremes of bathing and morning suits, a record-breaking total of 1,700 invitees, mostly newsmen and their wives, will jam the Executive Mansion, for a Presidential handshake, beer, midnight supper and the rare sight of the Vice President in circulation after 9 p. m.

Informal Dress Prevails

The party, an innovation of President Roosevelt, has been annual since 1933. Despite criticism from temperance groups, beer kegs have always found a prominent place in the marble foyer. After the first year, when reporters provided tuxedo renting parlors with a land-office business—only to find that the President himself appeared in a rumpled seercucker—flannels, white suits and summer dinner jackets have been the rule.

An innovation this year will be the absence of paid entertainers from the outside, who are ordinarily brought to the White House for official receptions. The idea now is that a real holiday for reporters, who must listen to other people perform for 364 days in the year, consists in listening to no one but themselves.

The only paid performers will be the orchestra of Joe Moses, which will play for the party for the third consecutive year. An indication of the President's catholic taste in music is seen from his special requests to Moss—"Home on the Range," "The Yellow Rose of Texas," "Anchors Aweigh," the fire music from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," "My Wild Irish Rose" and "The Halls of Montezuma."

Clear Weather Expected

Fears were expressed that if rainy weather kept the tremendous crowd within the White House walls, the sardining effect would be pronounced. Clear weather, however, is expected to enable guests to stroll through the lighted gardens.

A Presidential dinner for the heads of the press organizations will precede the dance. Many cocktail parties are being planned to precede the reception, among them one of Secretary of War Woodring, who will take the occasion to celebrate his forty-ninth birthday.

Lehman Vetoes Bill on Imports At Hull's Request

Albany, N. Y., May 30 (U.P.).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, acting at the request of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, tonight vetoed a bill which would have required most articles sold in the State to be plainly marked with their place of origin. Some foodstuffs were excepted.

Lehman explained the measure "appears to be unnecessary" because of similar Federal legislation. He quoted from a letter in which Hull wrote:

"In my opinion, the imposition of discriminatory requirements upon the sale of imported goods within any State would be most unfortunate in view of the efforts being made by the Federal Government to restore our foreign commerce by securing the removal of excessive and discriminatory barriers to the sale of American products abroad."

American Gesture Returned

Returning Port Angeles' gesture by which the town conveyed "to the King and Queen the kindly interest and the spirit of the American Nation," Victoria invited 100 leading citizens of the American community to the council chamber for the official ceremonies.

Victoria, "City of Flowers," outdid herself in filling the city hall chamber with the most fragrant and colorful blooms that could be found. Pink predominated. And more than once, the Queen signified her pleasure with the novel reception by a meaningful glance or nod.

Mayor Andrew McGavin, whose speech announced his Scottish ancestors, presented the King with an illuminated welcome inceased in an Indian-carved totem pole, about 18 inches long. King George was noticeably pleased by the originality of the presentation.

The Queen, too, beamed when the mayor's wife gave her a bouquet tied with the tartan of the Farquhar Clan. The former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, Her Majesty is affiliated with that clan.

Forgot to Take Her Hand

Although "snubbed" by a flustered subject who forgot to take her proferred hand after he had taken that of the King, the Queen smiled sympathetically and helped partially cover up the embarrassment of a leading Victoria citizen.

Two unscheduled incidents marked the official luncheon. As the King and Queen entered the hall a waiter dropped his tray of cocktails. A short time later, as the King delivered his speech, a photographer's flash bulb exploded within 50 feet of His Majesty, who continued to speak undisturbed.

The King, attired in his admiral's uniform, seemed to be weary and "fed up" today. He was seen to smile only once and that was when he met a Victoria Cross man. He always smilesan encountering these heroes who correspond to America's recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The Queen, however, seems to get more radiant. Today she wore a costume of lilac with long gloves of the same shade. She also wore a bolero.

Garner, Averse to Social Affairs, Heads Officials Who'll Meet King at Embassy

While most of the guests at the largest garden party ever planned at the British Embassy make their bows and curtsies on the sweeping, well-manicured lawn on the afternoon of June 2, a hand-picked group of high-ranking American officials will meet Their Majesties on the portico.

So said Lady Lindsay yesterday at a press conference that touched on a variety of subjects, ranging from the American-designed Washington-made frocks she has chosen for the major social functions planned for the royal couple, to the selection of a British naval band to play for the garden party.

"God Save the King," played by the 16-piece band from the British cruiser Exeter, will announce the appearance of the King and Queen, who will start their rounds of the garden shortly after they have greeted the topflight group of officials.

Garner Heads Officials

Heading American officials at this ceremony, because of his Vice Presidential prerogatives, will be "Cactus Jack" Garner, whose aversion to formal social functions has been well publicized. It will, in fact be one of the most rigidly formal days in the life of the easy-going Texan, for he and Mrs. Garner will help the President receive the British sovereigns at Union Station, eat dinner with them at the White House that night, and dine with them a the British Embassy on the following evening.

Great Britain's national anthem also will herald the departure of the royal couple at the garden party. They will be entertained that evening at the state dinner at the White House.

The American-born wife of the British Ambassador passed up Paris creations in selecting her wardrobe for the royal visit. Her three frocks picked for the major social events to be attended by Their Majesties were made in the District of Columbia.

Her beige lace garden party gown will be set off with a plum-colored straw hat "neither large nor small" and a blending needlepoint bag.

Her frock for the White House dinner is silver and gold brocade, sprinkled with a blue design and fashioned with a slight train. For the British Embassy dinner, she has chosen gray, lace, floor-length, with a medium neckline. At both dinners her ensemble will be accented with diamonds—a bandeau, pin, necklace and bracelets.

Other sidelights revealed in yesterdays' conference were that:

Four members of the royal entourage will stay at the British Embassy during the visit of the King and Queen—Lady Nunburnholme, lady-in-waiting; the Earl of Eldon, lord-in-waiting; the Earl of Airlie, lord chamberlain to Her Majesty the Queen, and George F. Steward, chief press liaison officer for the royal couple.

Provision for Rain

Guests arriving at the garden party well ahead of the time set for their Majesties to appear, may enter through the house; those coming later will go directly to the garden.

In case of rain, the "gospel tents" stretched on an adjoining lot may be reached through a wide gate in the iron garden fence. The refreshment tent at the end of the lawn can also serve as shelter from a shower.

Playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" is not scheduled on the program for the garden party, since President and Mrs. Roosevelt will not attend.

Only item on the party menu to be prepared at the embassy will be the white wine punch. Strawberries and cream, sandwiches and cakes will be furnished by a caterer.

There have been a few additions to the garden party guest list in the past week, but only in the case of persons who would have been invited anyway if Lady Lindsay had known they were available, it was said.

Capitol to Be Shut For Reception

"Honors" will be done by the spcial joint committe, headed by Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and including Majority Leader Barkley and Minority Leader McNary, from the Senate, and Acting Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Relations Committee; Majority Leader Rayburn and Minority Leader Martin, from the House.

Attending the King and Queen from the moment they leave their automobile, the committee will take its place in the rotunda with the royal party, including Sir Ronald Lindsay and Lady Lindsay.

Etiquette of the occasion then calls for members of the Senate, led by Vice President Garner, to come forward in single file. Garner will take his place beside the Queen, while Pittman, beside the King, presents members of the Senate. Garner will then retire with members of the Senate, and Speaker Bankhead, leading the House members, will take his stand beside the Queen. Representative Bloom, taking Pittman's place beside the King, will present the House members, it was tentatively decided.

Handshaking a Puzzle

Will they shake hands? Mopping a perspiring brow, Representative Bloom was unable definitely to answer that question yesterday.

"It all depends on whether the King offers to," Bloom said. "If he extends his hand, then it will be all right."

Coaching colleagues, Bloom advises members to say merely "Your Majesty" when presented, and after that, if interrogated, to answer questions with a concluding "Sir" to the King and "Ma'am" to the Queen.

On the west wall of the rotunda, in direct line of vision with the spot assigned to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, hang paintings reminiscent of the colonial struggle with another British King—George III. Three huge frames portray the surrender of Gen. Cornwallis, at Yorktown, the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne, at Saratoga, and the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Outside the Capitol, elaborate arrangements have been completed for accommodating families of Senators and members, the press, Capitol employes and the general public. The press will occupy grass plots on either side of the main Capitol steps. Chaired stands will be erected 200 feet out into the plaza, providing seats for 3,000 members' families and guests (about five seats to each member).

No National Airs

On leaving the Capitol, immediately following the presentations, the King and Queen will walk down an aisle through these stands to their car, and circle them once as their automobile drives around past the Capitol steps.

At the far plaza end of the aisle another stand will be erected for the Marine Band. Tentatively it has been decided that neither British nor American national airs will be played during the visit. The committee laid stress on the reception's three-quarters-of-an-hour limitation, barely enough time to swiftly present individual members of Congress. Time out for national anthems, it was said, might prolong the visit beyond the stipulated 45 minutes.

Standing space for Capitol employes will be provided on the steps of the House and Senate entrances.

Glimpse for the Public

Where will the general public be during the Capitol proceedings? Behind the ropes on the far side of the plaza, but they should be able to catch a glimpse of the King and Queen as they arrive and depart.

Protective arrangements were slid to contemplate assignment of 200 Marines, 200 sailors and 200 soldiers to the Capitol Grounds, who would be stationed every 6 feet around the plaza. In addition, 100 policemen, 100 plainclothesmen and a small Secret Service contingent would be on duty. Policemen would be stationed about the building and on the Capitol roof, overlooking the plaza.

Fans Rush Singer

The occasion was marred only by a wild rush from autograph seekers who mobbed Lanny Ross when he had completed renditions of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Recessional."

In the House of Representatives, members laid aside debate to honor colleagues who answered their last "roll call" during the past year. Brief addresses by Representatives Jenkins, of Ohio, and McGranery, of Pennsylvania, and sacred songs by John Carter, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, marked the program.

In a prepared address, Representative Jenkins said:

"Our national memories, which inspire our patriotism, are a safer defense for the republic than our strong, efficient armies or our swift, magnificent navies."

Representative McGranery warned that members of Congress "must be militant to maintain liberty in the face of alien and corrupting influences that seek to undermine it within our borders against military aggression from abroad.

Senate Suspends Debate

On the roll of dead were Senators J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, and Royal S. Copeland, of New York, and Representatives Robert Low Bacon and John Boylan, of New York; Charles J. Golden, of California; A. H. Gasque, of South Carolina; Stephen W. Gambrill, of Maryland; Ben Cravens, of Arkansas; John B. Daly, of Pennsylvania, and Clarence W. Turner, of Tennessee.

The Senate, although in session, suspended debate for two hours to pay tribute to Senators Lewis and Copeland. A new custom was inaugurated with the placing of floral pieces on the desks of the departed members.

Throughout the day, patriotic and veteran organizations participated in wreath-laying at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

G. U. Observance

At Georgetown University earlier in the day Brig. Gen. Lorenzo A. Gasser, of the Army General Staff, led ceremonies honoring the memories of five university students who fell during the World War. Also taking part in the exercises were Dean George E. Hamilton, the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., and Lieut. William P. Connelly, jr., of the senior class.

The Second Division Association held services at 2 p. m. at its monument in Potomac Park, with Senator Elmer Thomas as speaker. Delegations from the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American War Veterans and Jewish War Veterans also took part.

At the Washington Cathedral the Dewey Congressional Medal Men's Association paid tribute to President Wilson and the late Admiral Dewey and Mrs. Dewey. Members of the group served with Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay.

First Division Meets

Veterans of the First Division assembled at the First Division Monument, south of the Treasury Department, to honor their fallen comrades, and Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, wartime commander of the "Fighting First," placed a wreath.

Representative Martin F. Smith, of Washington, made the principal address at services in the Soldiers' Home under auspices of the District of Columbia Department of the United Spanish War Veterans. Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, U. S. A., retired, presided and Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, daughter of Gen. John A. Logan, of Civil War fame, read an order issued by her father establishing May 30 as Memorial Day.

The United States Secret Service, honoring the memory of Robert K. Webster, who met death on the high seas in performance of his duty, sent a delegation to his grave in Arlington for wreath laying ceremonies.

British Exercises

At another ceremony in Arlington Cemetery, Col. R. C. Reed, military attache of the British Embassy, placed a wreath on the Canadian Cross at exercises sponsored by the National Capital Chapter of the Disabled American War Veterans.

In the Battle Ground National Cemetery in Brightwood, Representative Dondero, of Michigan, lauded the memory of 40 soldiers killed in action at Fort Stevens, Brightwood, on July 11 and 12, 1864. The United States Navy Band played and graves were decorated by school children.

Cooley McCullough Post, No. 22, of the American Legion, conducted exercises at the Arlington grave of Vincent G. Cooley, first District boy killed in the World War. He died in action in October, 1918, and the post was named in his memory.

"New Animosities"

The battlefields of Gettysburg were trampled by one of the largest holiday crowds in history and Senator Byrd, of Virginia, first Southerner ever to deliver a Memorial Day address there, told his listeners that old sectional hatreds have been replaced by new class animosities.

Veteran organizations in Hyattsville paraded from the Armory to Peace Cross at Bladensburg, where a large gathering heard Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer. Mount Rainier veterans unveiled the names of five deceased town leaders inscribed on a granite shaft, which was dedicated last Memorial Day.

The American Legion War Memorial in Clarendon was the scene of more ceremonies when Sergt. Frank Witchey, famed retired bugler of the Army, sounded "Taps" and a Fort Myer rifle squad fired volleys into the cloudless sky.

Hungarians Hold Rites

Magyar and American war heroes were honored here yesterday by delegates attending the Convention of the Hungarian Reformed Federation of America.

Representing 13 States, they met in the morning at Grace Reformed Church, Fifteenth and O streets northwest, worship place of President Theodore Roosevelt, and heard Dr. Frank Ujlaki, president of the Federation, laud the departed warriors.

Later in the day at Arlington Cemetery, Stephen Molnar, Federation secretary, placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, and spoke.

Then the delegates joined in services at the graves of Julius Stahel, general in the Hungarian and Union armies, and Mathias E. Rozsaffy, major in the Civil War, and first Magyar journalist in America.

Leading the rites were Edmund Vasvary, auditor of the federation; George Borsy-Kerekes, of Washington, field secretary of the federation, and Alexander Zambory, of Perth Amboy, N. J., president of the Hungarian Weekly Newspaper Syndicate.

Dr. Alexander Toth, of Lancaster, Pa., presided over Holy Communion at Grace Church.

Devotions were given by the Right Rev. Endre Sebestyen, Duquesne, Pa.; the Rev. Mr. Borsy Kerekes, Dr. Geza Takaro, the Rev. Mr. Vasvary and the Rev. Alexander Ludman. Greetings were brought by Dr. Henry H. Ranck, pastor of the host church. Valentine Boldogh, of Washington, was organist.

was more seriously injured and fled in the friend's car. During the flight the car skidded from the road and ran down the embankment. Police believe Di Blasi was injured in a second fight on the river bank.

It was a short distance downstream from the scene of this quarrel that Di Blasi's body was discovered by Phyllis Carow, 19, and Barbara, 21, sisters, of 6104 Ridge drive, Brookmont, while they were paddling up the feeder canal in a canoe about 300 feet from the river.

Di Blasi, police said they learned, previously had lent his car to two friends who drove to Washington and were to have met him back at the inn later Sunday afternoon.

Friends Return Car

The friends returned to the inn and, unable to find Di Blasi, began a search for him. Failing, they left his car on Eighth street, near F northwest, where it was found by police last night. The car was taken to the Tenth Precinct Station for examination for fingerprints.

When the Carow sisters made their find, Di Blasi's body was bent double, the feet stuck in the soft mud of the canal bank.

Body Fully Clothed

The water at this point is about 4 feet deep, and Di Blasi's head and shoulders were above water. He was fully clothed save for a coat.

Dr. Benjamin Perry, who made the initial examination of the body, judged from its condition that Di Blasi died shortly after leaving home.

Authorities said they believed Di Blasi's body had floated down the river some distance above the point at which it was found and that it had been swept into the canal and jammed into the mud by the current.

The body bore marks which police believe indicated violence. These were a discoloration, resembling a bruise, behind the ear, and scratches on the face. An autopsy is to be performed today.

In addition to the condition of the body, there were these circumstances which led investigators to hold to a foul-play theory of the death:

Failure to find Di Blasi's car, a new sedan in the neighborhood of where the body was discovered.

Absence of money from his wallet. He was known to have been carrying money when he left home, though members of the family could not tell how much.

Failure of Di Blasi to get in touch with any of his friends. It was believed he would not start a fishing trip at night without a companion.

Inability of police to locate any person with boats to hire in the vicinity of where the body was found, who had rented Di Blasi a boat.

Highways Searched

Montgomery County police combed highways in the vicinity of where the body was found for several hours yesterday before broadcasting a three-State lookout for the car.

Scratches and bruises on the body were not believed by investigators to be severe enough to indicate that Di Blasi had been slain and then thrown into the water. It was believed, however, that he may have been pushed from a boat in a scuffle or had been knocked unconscious.

Had Di Blasi died by accident while fishing with a friend or acquaintance, police theorized, a report would have been made to authorities.

A check was being made by Washington police last night to determine if Di Blasi had been seen in the city since he left home.

Di Blasi, a native of Washington and a former student at the Petworth School, worked in the real estate office of his father, Joseph Di Blasi.

4 Violent Deaths

Two drownings and a traffic death yesterday marred Washington's Memorial Day celebration as thousands took to the Potomac and nearby beaches to escape the city's 90-degree heat.

A third m[illegible] was drowned between Carrs Beach and Annapolis Roads, Md., when he fell out of his boat. His body was not immediately recovered and [illegible]entity was unknown.

Maryland and Virginia beaches reported record crowds for the year, and 55,000 persons visited the Zoo. Although traffic was heavy on all major traffic arteries, police said there were few jams.

Two colored boys, Clayton Spencer, 14, of 1746 Willard court northwest, and Bernard Gaskins, 14, of 1821 Riggs place northwest, were drowned in sight of scores of boating enthusiasts in the Potomac just off 4120 K street northwest.

Six-year-old Myles Tyree, of 116 Chicago street southeast, was killed when he fell in front of an auto as he ran across the street near his home and was run over. He was dead on arrival at Providence Hospital. The child had been to a store for a soda pop.

Fred Cohen, 74, of 604 Farragut street northwest, succumbed yesterday in Emergency Hospital. He had been hit by an auto here April 12.

MERCURY OWNERS WRITE AN AD!...

"During the last 20 years I have owned and operated many different types and makes of automobile, but I have never yet experienced the thrill and ease of operation that I have with my new Mercury..."

"First car I have ever owned whose gasoline mileage exceeded my expectations...with the speed ranging from 50 to 70 miles an hour, the gasoline mileage was 18.4 miles per gallon..."

"All cars, of course, have their special points and features, but I don't believe that I have ever before found one that combined all of the desirable features of the Mercury..."

"I am of the opinion that in the Mercury I have small car economy with big car performance, riding qualities, safety and elegance. The way this car handles...is amazing."

"I have owned both lighter and heavier cars than this but none that exceeded the Mercury in roadability...fulfilled every promise...about 18.8 miles to the gallon...a marvelous product."

"I drive along the streets and necks are craned ...stop, and passers-by gather...go into my favorite parking lot and attendants scramble for the privilege of jockeying it around..."

All these statements are actual quotes from letters by owners of the new Mercury 8

Elwood Street May Be Called In Smith Case

Testimony Would Be At Request of Former School Head

Elwood Street may be called from Richmond, Va., to testify in the public hearings on Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith's ouster from the superintendency of the National Training School, it was revealed yesterday.

It was learned the former director of public welfare, who resigned his post to direct the Richmond Community Chest, may be called on the request of the former superintendent.

Hearings will resume today at 1:30 p. m. when Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, who has been acting as "prosecutor" during the hearings, will present the following witnesses: Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare; Paul L. Kirby, acting welfare director, and Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School for the Feeble-minded at Laurel, Md., who was placed in charge at the girls' institution when Dr. Smith was dismissed in October, 1937. Dr. Lewald is now back at the Laurel institution.

Testimony on Parole

It is expected McReynolds will be asked to testify on a previous allegation that Dr. Smith paroled five inmates without formal consent.

Miss Jean Bromley, parole officer at the school, stated last week she had records to show that the former superintendent had permitted the five inmates to leave the school without first receiving the sanction of the board.

Dr. Smith's Witnesses

Dr. Smith will present her own witnesses at tomorrow's session before the Commissioners. She said she expected to have testimony from Dr. Winifred Richmond, St. Elizabeths Hospital psychiatrist; Mrs. Richard W. Hogue, former president of the League of Women Voters; Miss Katharine Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor; Mrs. William Kittle, president of the District Minimum Wage Board, and Dr. Lucy Woodward, of Miners Teachers College.

Parley Is Sought To Avert Strike On D. C. Buildings

Attempts will be made today by Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, to bring about a conference between employers and union officials to avert a threatened strike called for next Monday that would cripple work on a number of public buildings and monuments, he stated last night.

The International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union of America, No. 74, is demanding an increased pay rate for common and semiskilled labor, Colvin reported. The Master Builders Association and several subcontractors' associations have resisted the demands.

More than 2,000 laborers on major construction projects were reported involved. Among projects affected would be the Jefferson Memorial, Mellon Art Gallery, Government Printing Office, Census and Social Security buildings, Municipal and Juvenile Court buildings.

Cell Bolt Loose; 2 D. C. Jail Convicts Put in Solitary

Two prisoners at the District Jail were under close watch last night in solitary quarters after the bolt to the door of their cell was found to have been tampered with, Capt. Thomas Rives, superintendent, announced.

Rives said he thought there was no chance for the men to escape but he decided to move them pending a thorough investigation. He did not reveal their names.

Guards making a routine check discovered the door bolts had been loosened and could be pulled out at any time. Both men were serving terms of one year, one on charges of false pretenses and the other for violations of narcotic laws.

Congressmen Sponsor Moral Rearmament

Cabinet Officers Back Mass Meeting Here Sunday

Cabinet officers and legislators were included in a list of sponsors for a national "Moral Re-Armament" meeting in Constitution Hall next Sunday night. That was announced yesterday from headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel.

Marking the first anniversary of an international movement initiated by Dr. Frank Buchman of the Oxford Group, the gathering will be the second large meeting of the sort in the United States. The first was in Madison Square Garden, New York, May 14. Earlier this month a meeting in preparation for Sunday's mass gathering was held in the National Press Club here.

Dr. Buchman Expected

Dr. Buchman is expected to be present at Sunday's meeting as well as visitors from a number of foreign countries.

A spokesmen for the organizers of the Washington meeting yesterday quoted Dr. Alexis Carrel's message to the New York meeting as summing up excellently the purpose of the meeting.

"Civilization today stands at the crossroads," Dr. Carrel was quoted. "We speak of peace. But we must not forget that life loves the strong; that peace demands strength. The strength of nations like that of man is composed of spiritual as well as material elements. Therefore the call of the hour must be a call to moral and physical virility. And the spiritual rearming of men and nations must lead the way."

ernment, and the remainder turned over to the Judiciary Committee.

Byron indicated he would resign at the conclusion of the milk inquiry. Chairman Bates several times also has indicated his desire to quit since the investigation began. Only Schulte, who is slated to be the next "mayor" if Randolph quits, seemed eager to continue his assignment.

House leaders, or President Roosevent himself, may be forced to step in to salvage the Kennedy reorganization bill and the revenue measure. If the tax bill dies, the District's realty tax rate may have to be boosted beyond the present $1.75 to pay for 1940 appropriations.

Unless some form of reorganization bill is passed, District officials said, the reappointment of George Allen as Commissioner to direct the shake-up will accomplish little. The Commissioner would be restricted to a minor reshuffling of departments.

The milk inquiry, if it is not dropped entirely, is believed due to tear the District Committee further asunder. Even though new legislation should be pushed through the House by a bloc of Western members and Republicans, it doubtless would be tied up in the Senate by Senators from Maryland and Virginia.

British Propose Defense Parleys

tuerd as "definitely not pessimistic.")

[The London Daily Mail, in a dispatch from Paris, asserted Soviet acceptance of the three-power alliance proposals would be confirmed in Molotoff's speech. According to this dispatch, the Soviet Ambassador, Jacob Souritz, told Bonnet of the Kremlin's decision.

[These reports were unconfirmed in Moscow, according to the Associated Press, although it was expected Molotoff would give some clews to Russia's course.

[British and French embassies there had received no replies to last week's proposals, it was said, but observers believed it possible Molotoff would call the British and French representatives to the Kremlin to deliver a formal reply before he makes his speech, expected at about 7:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m. E. S. T.). —Editor's note.]

The text of the British draft, which runs about 400 words and includes 6 articles, is paraphrased as follows:

If Great Britain or France shall become involved in war in Europe as result of a direct attack on either, or as a result of a fulfillment of the guarantees which they have given to another power or powers (the Anglo-French guarantees to Poland, Rumannia and Greece), or in case any state in Europe applies for assistance and Britain or France renders the requested aid, then the U. S. S. R. will come to the assistance of Great Britain or France with all its armed forces. Similarly, Great Britain and France undertake to come t othe assistance of the U. S. S. R. in case the Soviet Union shall become involved in war in Europe in either of the three contingencies mentioned above.

The assistance given by any of the three contracting powers in the aforementioned contingencies shall be rendered in accordance with the principles of Article 16 of the League of Nations Covenent (providing for the branding of "aggressor" nations and the application of military and economic sanctions against them by League states).

Negotiations shall be conducted to ascertain the manner in which the three contracting parties shall assist one another (probably including general staff consultations).

Pact to Endure Five Years

The three contracting powers agree to consult in case of the imminent danger of aggression in Europe.

In rendering assistance the three contracting powers shall respect the interests of the third parties receiving aid (intended to meet the wishes of states such as Poland which are reluctant to allow Soviet troops to be stationed on or to march across their territories).

The duration of the pact to be five years, with the customary provisions for giving notice of termination, for expiration and for renawel.

It was understood Moscow would request modification of two of the British draft's six articles—the one aligning the treaty with the League of Nations Covenant and the one providing for tripower consultation in event of the menace of aggression anywhere in Europe.

British diplomats were convinced, however, that Russia's objections would be overcome speedily and that a complete agreement would be achieved within a fw days.

Automatic Operation Desired

The British spokesman today gave assurances, similar to those already sent to Moscow, that Britain and France want the tripower alliance to be as "automatic" in operation as possible.

This assurance was designed to dispel Soviet suspicions aroused by the draft's article No. 2 stating that any aid given to an attacked nation shall be in accordance with the principles of the League Covenant article 16.

The foreign office was understood to have instructed Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador to Moscow, to explain that article 2 of the draft is not intended to make mutual assistance among the three powers dependent upon League machinery or the cumbersome operations of the League Covenant. It merely is to affirm, the foreign office said, that the triple alliance is peaceful in purpose and abides by the spirit of the League.

The Soviets also are seeking a clearer definition of what Britain and France have in mind under Article 4 of the proposed draft, dealing with consultation in case the danger of aggression in Europe develops. Moscow, it was learned, wants to make sure that the proposed consultations would not in any way retard effective action against an aggressor.

Sen. Bailey Arrives At College in Truck

Elon College, N. C., May 30 (U.P.).—Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, who was to introduce Jonathan Daniels as principal speaker at graduation exercises here today before both received honorary degrees of doctors of literature, had college officials a little worried when time came for the exercises and he hadn't shown up. He arrived a few minutes later, however, in a delivery truck.

them being abandonment of the mandatory embargo on munitions for warring nations. He said he believed there should be Congressional action on the proposals at this session.

He said in reply to questions that he had seen news dispatches that Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, would be receptive to the Republican Presidential nomination on a pledge to seek no more than one term, but he would not discuss it further.

Postmaster General Farley, Mr. Roosevelt said, gave him very favorable reports on his recent trip across the country.

Commenting on the Pennsylvania Legislature's passage of a bill to outlaw sit-down strikes, the President said there never had been any question that such strikes, by and large, were illegal under the laws of most States, and that they were chiefly a matter of State jurisdiction.

Only a few neighbors of Dutchess County will be invited to a picnic here June 11 for King George and Queen Elizabeth, he said. The problem at the picnic, and at church services the morning of June 11, he said, will be one of numbers—the number of persons in the British, Canadian and American parties, and the size of the Roosevelt family.

Idea of Perfect Competition Held False

Economics Expert Voices Views at Georgetown

Economists must rid themselves of the "idea that anything resembling perfect competition can in fact be established or would be desirable if it could" Dr. E. H. Chamberlain, Harvard University economics professor, last night told a Georgetown University sesquicentennial round table.

Dr. Chamberlain spoke at an evening session on history and economics arranged by the university's graduate school as part of the school's 150th birthday celebration.

"It is increasingly recognized in contemporary economic thought," Dr. Chamberlain declared, "that competition and monopoly are . . . mixed and blended in all degrees throughout the economic system."

Can't Escape Competition

No monopolist, he maintained, is entirely free from competition. Everything, he said, in some degree competes with everything else and most "actual monopolists are subject to it (competition) in a degree of whose intensity they are keenly aware."

He cited the case of the railroads, once considered the perfect monopoly, which today find themselves faced with the severest of competition from other forms of transportation.

"The public utility and the corner grocery store are different only in degree," he stated. "Each is a monopolist selling a product distinguished in some measure from its nearest substitutes, and each is subject to the competition of these substitutes. We can no long separate industries into two categories according as they are monopolistic or competitive by nature and our past policy for regulation of natural monopolies and preservation of anti-trust laws of competition in all industries is thereby seriously called into question."

Mentions Advertising

Dr. Chamberlain found the vast phenomena of advertising a sign that monopoly is very generally blended with competition. "It appears," he said, "that only a monopolist would advertise, for only he can direct a substantial portion of the demand he creates toward his own product.

The Rev. Moorhouse F. X. Millar, S. J., head of the political science department of Fordham University, in an address on the American and French revolutions, called the U. S. Constitution the "most singular instance of political and social planning in history."

Other round table speakers were Dr. Joseph Solterer, head of the Georgetown economics department, on "Economic Theory and Economic Policy;" the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., director of Georgetown libraries, on "Early Catholic Institutions," and Dr. Richard J. Purcell, head of the Catholic University history department, on "American Backgrounds of Georgetown's Foundation."

Ceremonies in the Georgetown Law School yesterday honored the university's World War dead. Brig. Gen. Lorenzo A. Gasser, U. S. A. general staff; James Tracy Brady, '21, Veterans Administration solicitor and department commander of the American Legion; William Price Connally, jr., and Jeremiah F. Mahoney were the speakers. Dean George E. Hamilton presided.

A committee of Army and Reserve officers placed a wreath on a memorial plaque bearing the names of the dead. The Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S.J., regent, gave the invocation.

Nationally known authorities will discuss phases of the labor and monopoly problems as the Law School's contribution to the celebration in a symposium to be conducted today, starting at 2 p. m. in the John Carroll Auditorium in the Law School Building.

Today's List of Speakers

Speakers will include Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO; Joseph Padway, general counsel of the A. F. of L.; the Right Rev. Francis Joseph Haas, Catholic University economics professor; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, a member of the class of '20; Willis A. Ballinger, Federal Trade Commission; John T. Flynn, Seth W. Richardson and Wendell Berge, special assistant to the Attorney General.

An evening round table, starting at 8:30 p. m. in Gaston Hall, will consider aspects of the work of bench and bar in the last 150 years. Among the speakers will be Dr. James Brown Scott, honorary president of the American Society of International Law; Frank J. Hogan, '02, president of the American Bar Association, and Edmund W. Flynn, '15, chief justice of Rhode Island.

"Government Through Administrative Policy-Making" will be the subject of a second law school program tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Three days, beginning tomorrow, will be devoted to consideration of recent advances in medicine and surgery in the fourth annual extension course arranged for alumni by the School of Medicine. Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Irvin Abell, past president of the American Medical Association, will be among the leading speakers.

U Street Dinner Meeting

The annual dinner meeting of the U Street Neighborhood Council will be held at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. at 5.45 p. m. June 6. The summer program will be outlined and officers will be elected for the coming year.

Graduated From Junior College at Gunston Hall

Twenty-five graduating students of Gunston Hall School heard Coleman Jennings, Community Chest director, stress "Courage and Love" as life's most important virtues at commencement exercises yesterday.

Following a prayer and musical selections, diplomas were presented to the graduates, included among whom were the triplet grand nieces of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Misses Edith, Elena and Mildred Bolling Boyd, daughters of Dr. Jorge Boyd, of Panama. Other girls graduating were:

Academic Diploma

Augusta Hodges Clarke, Rhode Island.
Barbara Zane Delbert, Dist. of Columbia.
Nancy Louise Hall, California.
Rose Bedford Webb, South Carolina.
Alice-Christine Young, Dist. of Columbia.

tion of the first company, winners of the intercompany drill competition, and as such entitled to carry the colors in the June week parades.

Ramrod-stiff and at rifle salute, the Midshipmen stood as statues while the color girl, on Jarvis' arm and followed by the admiral and his staff, toured the hollow square. Not an eye blinked nor a muscle moved as the Midshipmen did their annual obeisance to beauty.

Her tour of inspection completed, Miss Moses was given three cheers by the winning color company, their white caps rising thrice in unison. In turn, the 2,300 Midshipmen cheered the color company as the color girl's entourage moved back to the reviewing stand.

The two young people from Arkansas, Miss Moses and Jarvis, were the stars of the pageant on the academy yard. Jarvis was authorized to name the color girl when his company won the competition, and chose Miss Moses, president of the junior class at Sweet Briar College, Va.

Today, under the canopy of scudding fleecy clouds and cobalt sky, the pair symbolized all the romance and charm of historic June Week.

The regiment, led by the First Company after the colors were presented, executed a half-hour of faultlessly precise evolutions in the formal parade.

Tonight, Naval athletes and graduating midshipmen were dispensers of bids to their favorite debutantes. Only balls scheduled were the "N" Club dance for athletic award winners and the first classmen's hop.

But there was no lack of activity for the three lower classes. With added liberty since June week began, midshipmen and their bright-frocked "drags" were everywhere in colonial Annapolis.

Tea shoppes and restaurants bulged. Cigarettes winked like fireflies from canoes dotting the mirror surface of the Severn's estuaries under a near-full summer moon. Couples strolled in soft-voiced converse under the trees in the velvet night along the old brick sidewalks of Crabtown.

Only tomorrow's full program was between the midshipmen and graduation Thursday, which closes June week. The graduation list contains the names of 577 midshipmen due to receive diplomas.

Aquatic events and seamanship demonstrations start tomorrow at 10 a. m. with drill events in the departments of ordnance and gunnery, marine and electrical engineering and physical training following.

Nonathletic awards for extra-curricular activity were to be given out at 11:15 a. m. at Memorial Hall. Graduates had a rehearsal billed for 2 p. m., and a band concert was set for 3:30 p. m.

Scholastic awards and prizes for outstanding merit were to be given at the formal dress parade at 5 p. m., second only in import to the presentation of colors.

The farewell June ball, most important event of the week save graduation, was tomorrow night.

Even the Plebes "come of age" and are permitted to attend the June ball, when undergraduates bid farewell to the first classmen slated to leave the academy on the morrow.

Hungary's Election

As was generally anticipated, the government party has won a resounding victory in this week's elections for the Hungarian Parliament. It is anticipated that, when all the results are in, government candidates will hold 190 of the 260 seats—59 more than a majority.

Premier Count Teleky and his colleagues thus have reason to congratulate themselves on the outcome of the balloting. It appears to be, on the surface at any rate, a real vote of confidence in the government's program and policies.

Yet the most striking result of the elections was not the government victory but the great percentage increase in the representation of the Hungarian Nazis. From three members in the last Parliament their numbers have now risen to nearly 30, making them the largest opposition party.

This development is all the more disturbing in view of the fact that the government has sought to undermine the Nazi movement in many ways, from imprisoning the Hungarian "Fuehrer," Ferenc Szalasi, to putting through anti-Semitic measures only less drastic than those in force in the Third Reich.

Evidently the device, employed by the Imredy and Teleky governments, of fighting fire with fire has not been altogether successful. The failure of the regime to sanction partitioning of the huge feudal estates has given the Nazis a great talking point among a large section of the Hungarian people. And the presence on Hungary's flank of an enlarged and powerful Germany provides the Hungarian Nazis with considerable moral support, to say the least.

Despite the territorial gains recently acquired as a result of the break-up of Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary's position is none too happy. There are grave unsolved social and economic problems confronting the government. And every internal problem is intensified by Hungary's helpless position vis-a-vis Germany.

In one sense the increase in Nazi strength in Hungary is a warning to the government to proceed with radical social reform. But it is also a clear warning that Hungary cannot at this time pursue any policy of independence from the Berlin-Rome axis.

Encouraging Gesture

The visit of four Senators to some of Washington's most decrepit school buildings was a fine gesture of good will toward the local community. Apparently, these four members of the subcommittee handling District appropriations were impressed by reports that hundreds of school children in the Nation's Capital are housed in structures long ago condemned. Despite many claims upon their time, they wanted to see for themselves some of the "old traps" about which Washington citizens have complained so long.

As a result of this tour of inspection there seems a good chance that funds will be included in the 1940 local appropriations bill to begin a school replacement program. Two legislators in the inspecting group pronounced these ancient schools "a disgrace" to the Capital. No doubt that would be the consensus of opinion in Congress if all members of the Senate and House could be induced to make a similar visit. But that is obviously out of the question.

It was thoughtful and considerate of Senators Overton, Capper, Nye and Chavez to give this personal attention to the District's school problem. But, of course, they realize all too well that the method followed in this case could not be readily applied to all public improvements here. If members of Congress were to inspect Lorton Reformatory, the jail, the municipal hospitals, the national training schools, the libraries and numerous other District institutions before granting funds for needed improvements, they would have little time left for national and international affairs.

That is undoubtedly one reason why the local government is operated in such haphazard fashion. Strategically placed legislators may be induced to give first-hand attention to one agency, much to its advantage. But they cannot possibly familiarize themselves with all the problems of local government without neglect of their responsibility to their constituents and to the Nation as a whole. Therefore appreciation of the interest now being manifested in Washington schools in no way minimizes the necessity of changing the system which requires Congressional scrutiny of issues so thoroughly local in character as the education of children. The greatest service these Senators could render the District would be to assist in transferring their responsibility for local affairs to a genuine municipal government.

Good Strategy

Senator Vandenberg's statement of principles that should guide the Republican Party in its selection of a Presidential candidate next year has made a good impression. The Senator has not announced himself as a contender for the nomination. His letter to the Michigan delegation in Congress leaves no doubt that he is in a receptive mood. But it is convincing in its emphasis that the national welfare should be placed above personal political ambition.

The first task of the 1940 Republican National Convention, says Mr. Vandenberg, will be to "set down clean-cut, constructive, courageous principles which dependably promise to save the American system of free enterprise under the renewed spirit of constitutional democracy." When the platform has been outlined, he adds, candidates in harmony with its principles can be selected. There is a clear suggestion that if the platform is not straightforward and constructive, the Senator would prefer to have the G. O. P. look elsewhere for a candidate.

Mr. Vandenberg's second point is that the Republican candidate should be "prepledged" to a single term. In practice such a pledge might prove to be unwise, as it did in the case of President Wilson. The Democratic Party elected Wilson in 1912 on a platform favoring a single Presidential term, little realizing that circumstances would make his renomination seem imperative in 1916. The nomination of popular Presidents for a second term is almost as deeply ingrained in the American system as is hostility to third-term candidacies.

It must be admitted, however, that the stand taken by Mr. Vandenberg has an unusual appeal at this time. Whoever the next President, he will be confronted by stupendous problems, not the least of which will be sharp retrenchment in Government spending. No doubt the next President would be less amenable to pressure groups if he renounced all hope of succeeding himself. It is contended, too, that the Senate, which is certain to remain under Democratic control until 1942, would be more inclined to cooperate with a Republican Chief Executive if he had no political irons in the fire.

Strength gained in this way might be lost by the weakened position in his own party of a President pledged to one term. That aspect of Mr. Vandenberg's proposal will doubtless be carefully examined by the G. O. P. in advance of any commitments. In the meantime, however, talk of pledging the Republican candidate to one term serves to increase the disadvantages of a third-term nomination on the Democratic side.

By emphasizing the vast responsibility of the Presidency, and the need for subordination of all personal ambition to the national welfare, Senator Vandenberg is employing good political strategy. And good politics and sound public policy are not necessarily incompatible.

Getting And Spending

It is interesting to know from what parts of the country the Federal Government derives its tax revenues and how it apportions farm subsidies and relief payments among the States.

But a good deal of confusion is likely to result from attempts to link tax payments by States with the amount of the Federal aid received by those same States. Comparisons of this sort almost always are made with the intention of showing that a particular State has been unduly favored or grossly discriminated against in the apportionment of Federal funds.

A survey covering five and one-half years indicates, for example, that New York State has paid into the Federal Treasury about $5,000,000,000 during that period but received slightly less than $1,400,000,000 in WPA and AAA grants. North Carolina has paid about $1,740,000,000 in Federal taxes, and received in return $167,000,000. Alabama, on the other hand, contributed slightly over $68,000,000 in taxes and obtained benefits in excess of $193,000,000.

Since relief funds are apportioned on the basis of need, and agricultural subsidies are concentrated in areas where farming is carried on extensively, there is actually no logical relation between the amount of Federal aid and the amount collected in the form of taxes within the boundaries of any given State. One of the chief reasons for the extensive resort to Federal aid is, indeed, that it enables funds collected in one part of the country to be used elsewhere. If the Federal Government felt obliged to adjust its local outlays to the amounts collected in taxes, it would not only be severely handicapped in its activities but it would be showing a very definite favoritism to certain States.

New York, for example, is a State into which flows income from productive operations conducted all over the United States. Because that income is taxed in New York does not mean that it was earned there. Similarly, the Federal Government obtains large returns from cigarette taxes in North Carolina. But the smokers of cigarettes in all parts of the United States pay those taxes in the form of higher prices for cigarettes.

In short, the Federal system of taxation is largely based on taxable sources of income not limited to particular States. The most interesting feature of the survey is the evidence of the national character of this system of taxation, despite the concentration of tax collections.

Gov. Winant's Report

It is now just a year since John G. Winant, formerly Governor of New Hampshire and more lately chairman of the Social Security Board, was elected director of the International Labor Office. His first report to the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, which convenes at Geneva on June 8, is made public today. It is a document of unusual interest.

In part this is due to the report's authoritative and comprehensive survey of world-wide economic and social problems. Issues generally treated from a national viewpoint, such as unemployment, wages and working conditions, social insurance, housing and nutrition, are here examined comparatively for all the principle industrial nations. The reader is thus enabled to see how progress in any field in a particular country compares with other countries which have followed a different approach.

Mr. Winant is very friendly to the Roosevelt Administration. Inferentially, his report strangely approves the New Deal program of "rapidly replacing any decline in private investment by well-prepared public investment." But when the report examines specific indices of prosperity it cannot be said that the United States shows up too well.

Our percentage of unemployment is among the highest of the nations considered. Our building activity has shown comparatively little recovery as compared with 1929 levels. Taking the same year as a base, the industrial production of only two other manufacturing countries—France and Belgium—had dropped lower than that of the United States at the time this report was compiled.

On the other hand, the statistics show that no other country except Germany, where price levels are strictly controlled, has had more stable living costs than the United States during the past three years. Next to France, also, this country has since 1932 shown the sharpest increase in real wages for those fortunate enough to be employed. Mr. Winant draws attention to these gains, but hazards no guess as to their permanence.

Beyond the statistical matter, however, Mr. Winant's report is impressive for the character of his personal foreword. Herein he combines a realistic survey of the problems of the present day with an impressive plea for greater support of the painstaking efforts of the I. L. O. to further international reconstruction. "It might be well to remind the peoples of the world," he says, that the total capital investment in the League of Nations, the World Court, the International Institute of Agriculture and the I. L. O. "is less than the cost of a modern battleship, and those who work in the institutions named number less than a single regiment."

Throughout this foreword Gov. Winant affirms his faith in the future of the international organization which he heads. The present world crisis, he concludes, "calls not for a contraction of activities but for an increasing effort and greater energy." One has the feeling that in his daily work at Geneva the American director of the I. L. O. is giving of both, in fullest measure, and that in the long run his labors will bear fruit for all mankind.

For Mrs. Izaak Walton

Two Milwaukee women recently sought, but failed to get, divorces from their husbands on the grounds that the latter spent too much time fishing. The judge ruled that fishing is a wholesome recreation to which even husbands may legitimately aspire. He added that wives who resent the piscatorial art are "unreasonable and overexacting."

With this for bait one might well pull in the surmise that the judge is a fisherman and that he considers a worm at the end of a line as happy as one tied to his wife's apron strings.

The sad part of the story lies in its indication that fishing has gone into a tailspin around Milwaukee. In this area, where the waters are still teeming and fishing produces results as well as alibis, the catch is usually warranted to allay domestic discord.

Consider the channel bass which are now moving up the coast toward Maryland. The reliable Bill Ackerman has lately reported details of the landing of two in the 75-pound class. Show one of that stature to the little woman and never again will she regard the man who caught it as a poor fish.

Political Shopping

From Nieuwe Rotterdam Sche Courant; translated in Living Age.

A customer came into a store and asked for oranges. "I am sorry," said the shop owner, "I have no oranges today." Hereupon the customer asked for butter—there was no butter either. Then he inquired about almonds. At that point, the shop owner became angry. "Have you come here to buy something or to talk about politics?"

Country's Guests

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The behavior of many of the newspapermen and the press in relation to the visit of the King and Queen, with the happy exception of Mr. Krock and Mr. Westbrook Pegler (and let us hope a few others), has been surprising and also humiliating to those of us who like to be proud of our country. There is, too, a humorous side when we see them behaving like snobs over royalty, and resenting that they or their wives and daughters are not asked to the garden party.

Could it not be pointed out that if they will realize a few facts they will make themselves more acceptable not only to the country's guests but also to the majority of Americans?

The King and Queen do not govern England. They are not responsible for the trouble in Palestine or anywhere else. They are to the British Empire what our flag is to us, a symbol. They are doing a hard job well, and they did not seek or desire it. Aside from their position they are two nice people who are going to be our guests, and we ought to be able to treat them with the courtesy we show friends in our own house, as well as having the realization that they represent their country and must be protected from the spite of those who wish to make trouble for anyone in their position.

If anything goes wrong during their stay here and they are submitted to the indignities that would hurt anyone anywhere, it will be largely the fault of those reporters who believe the people of this country would rather have certain bits of personal news than to have the country behave well to two friendly people who are our guests.

Let's hope the press and all of us come off as well as the King and Queen, in courtesy and good taste and in consideration and decent respect for their feelings. M. H. S.

Social Work

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have followed with a great deal of interest the series of articles which ran in The Washington Post ending last Sunday, May 21. This series carried maps from the research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies giving a graphic picture of social conditions in the District of Columbia.

The maps were very clear and informative and the articles which accompanied them gave an interpretation of social conditions in this city that I have not seen equaled before. I want to express my thanks to your paper for its public spiritedness in giving publicity to such a series of articles. This type of interpretation of our social conditions will make it all the easier for people to appreciate the need for a well developed program of social work in this city.

Canon Stokes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

According to the New Century Dictionary, philanthropy means "love of mankind, especially as manifested in deeds of practical beneficence." By this test Canon Stokes is a genuine philanthropist, if there ever was one.

Although Dr. Stokes' charitable and philanthropic activities cannot be limited or monopolized by any race or class, yet his life-long interest in the welfare of the Negro race stands out conspicuously. Philanthropy bestows itself most lavishly where it is most needed.

His many friends and well wishers, of both races, in Washington, however deeply they may regret his departure, cannot begrudge him his well earned "Otium Cum Dignitate."

Canon Stokes retires to his native Connecticut retreat to devote himself to the completion of a long cherished literary task, with farming as an aside. He carries with him the high esteem and best wishes of hosts of those whom he has served, not only in the National Capital, but throughout the nation. In his new adventure which involves the cultivation of the soil and the cultivation of the soul, he will be carrying on the nobelest pursuits in which human activities can engage. KELLY MILLER.

They Disagree With Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of May 29 Mr. Westbrook Pegler says that "the American people will not sympathize with an effort to create a homeland for people who are already citizens of other countries." If the various Secretaries of State, from Secretary Fish to the present time, reflect popular sentiment, then the American people do sympathize with the aim to do justice to an almost universally persecuted people. What is this desire to establish a homeland in Palestine and elsewhere but a desire to secure freedom for a harassed people from persecution?

As an American citizen I lose none of my loyalty and devotion to my country by giving of money and my time to help others less happily circumstanced. I myself do not want a home in Palestine, but I know that 5,000,000 others are praying daily to be given some measure of freedom. If they are starving, do we not help them? And if a plague visits them do we not assuage them?

What is wrong, then, when Germany and Poland and Rumania and Hungary and Italy deprive certain people of their rights, that we cry out in sheer humanity against the Hitler-bred madness? What is wrong if the United States, as the most benevolent of powers, intercedes in behalf of a persecuted race? Did America not sympathize with and help Ireland and Greece and Poland and other one-time enslaved nations? HERMAN FELTER.

Washington, May 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I heartily disagree with Westbrook Pegler's column of May 29 in which he says that the American Jews are disinterested in the establishment of Palestine as a Jewish homeland inspired by the Balfour Declaration.

While the majority of Jews in the United States are American citizens and intend to make America their permanent home, they nevertheless are sympathetic toward this national Jewish homeland idea and have been supporting it stronger than any other country in the world, if you will investigate the contributions and membership to the National Palestine Appeal for the last 15 years.

What the average American Jew desires is a Jewish homeland as a symbol of their nationality and a home for the oppressed of their race, from which they can also draw upon their old culture and racial inspiration, and not as a homeland for themselves.

It is similar to the Irish Free State cause, to which the Irish-Americans have been the greatest contributors in money and moral support. The average Irish-American does not intend to settle in Ireland, but he craved a free country for his own, in which a small portion of his race may live and cultivate the Irish culture and tradition, and as a symbol of his nationality. This in no way reduces his American citizenship, for which country he would willingly fight as would the Jewish-American. M. B. SHABER.

Before the Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The meeting of the King and Queen with the quints stimulates Mr. Mark Sullivan to thinking about the question of human inequalities in his column of May 25.

Be it explained that the burden of Mr. Sullivan's song is that inequality among human beings is natural and therefore those who strive to reduce inequalities are striving against nature herself. Now was there not some medieval nobleman who said substantially the same thing long before Mr. Sullivan? And yes, some patrician of old Rome, or some tyrant of old Greece, or some warlord along the ancient Nile who told his restive subjects that his rule was "natural" or perhaps "divine?"

With equal logic Mr. Sullivan might have pointed out that tuberculosis is perfectly natural; that those who labor to reduce its prevalence are dangerous fools striving against nature, and that anyone who says they can succeed is ipso facto a "demagogue."

Of course, no intelligent revolutionary ever said, as Mr. Sullivan implies, that all men are equal in mentality or morals or stature. All that was ever said or needed to be said by the intelligent radical of any time or clime, was stated in the French Declaration of the Rights of Man in a sentence which is a model of succinctness: "All men are born, and remain, equal in rights." Jefferson, who was in frequent contact with revolutionary spirits beyond the seas expressed the same idea when he wrote, ". . . all men are created equal and . . . are endowed . . . with certain inalienable rights . . ."

It is precisely because men are not equal in ability or opportunity, that equality in rights must be established. Equality in rights definitely does not mean that anyone should be deprived of the fruits of his ability for the benefit of those less able; it does mean that no one should be permitted to obtain a position by which he can aggrandize himself at the expense of those less fortunate.

No intelligent person, of course, is seriously concerned over the rare and accidental inequalities that result from someone's being born a quintuplet or a figure-head King. The inequality in human rights about which men and women are seriously concerned today is that which permits a small fraction of our people to own and control the capital goods upon which all of us depend for our subsistence and well-being; and which permits them to do it, not as a matter of public responsibility, but merely as a reward for their own acquisitiveness or as a hereditary prerogative.

The meeting of King and quints may do some good if it stimulates a few people to think of these things, but for millions of Americans no such stimulus is needed. The impact of existing inequalities upon their own lives has set them thinking already. C. A. F.

Thanks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Permit me to thank you for the space you have generously given to Rabbi Gerstenfeld's installation in your news columns and on your editorial page.

In the crisis that faces all of civilization, even those of us who have been indifferent to religion, today feel that it is not only freedom for religion that is important, but we need religion for freedom; that it is inter-sectarian rather than in non-sectarian fellowship that we have the most powerful expression of true democracy and the most effective dyke against the current totalitarianism being peddled throughout the world.

We are proud and happy for the attention you have given to this important occasion in the religious life of our good community.

Vignettes Of Vagabondia

THE ONLY WAY to increase the ugliness of some portions of the Mahoning and Cuyahoga valleys and of some of the industrial territory just east of Pittsburgh, is to increase the acreage. The ugliness of the portions visible from train windows is strictly pro rata. Dust, grime, paintlessness, piles of scrap-iron, cinders, slag, smoke. Houses from any one of whose sooty windows not a trace of beauty is in sight.

To this fact is due that other and contrasting fact that the occasional burst of green with its floral punctuation is such a delight. Were these spots of beauty set down in the midst of Hampton Court Gardens, we shouldn't notice them. But begirt as they are by 12 per cent unsightliness, they are veritable gems that fill us with untrammeled delight.

It was after leaving the Mahoning Valley and following the Cuyahoga ditto from Youngstown to Akron that I saw the loveliest crab-apple trees possible. There is nothing in all the floral kingdom more beautiful than a crab-apple tree in full bloom. It is the brightest, the glowingest yet the most delicate pink possible even to the great Artist who concocts on His palette the colors He is about to transfer to the great canvas of nature.

And add to the eye-gladdening color the rarest and most subtle perfume known to the chemistry of the Almighty—there is perfection! And the crab-apple trees don't care a couple of undersized whoops how much ugliness is in sight or how much noisomeness from other sources clutters up the olfactories of the passer-by. They are going to strut their stuff, and their very best stuff; going to be themselves and let the other objects composing the landscape assume the responsibility for their own performance.

If there is a lesson in that, find it yourself. I won't preach to you. People with sense enough to heed preaching don't need it. And it is wasted on those who haven't.

I am writing this on a train the morning after a great man made a phooey-on-appeasement speech. The newspaper in my hand glooms editorially about it. The other passengers are uneasy and want to talk discouragement. I look out of the car window and see that the trees are carrying an exceptionally heavy suit of foliage this spring. They have gone right on with their annual job, and the sign they flaunt is "Business as usual." If you were to mention budget-balancing or tax-reduction to them, they might look askance at you for a moment, but they would go right on at their highly skilled work of producing leaves and branches and blossoms and fruit from raw material we don't see.

What was it the hymneur said about "Where every prospect pleases and only man is vile"? The roots of that big wine-glass elm overshadowing that bend in the creek containing a hole in which I bet there are lots of minnows—that tree doesn't get excited and begin making maple leaves out of the elm sap its rootlets have collected from the soil and the convolutions of some subterranean seep. Nature's children don't get rattled. They "live and let live," which is the finest thing that can be done except "live and help live" which is what we humans must do.

There are cars loaded with coal now in sight from passenger trains. A few weeks ago the sidings and yards were all littered up with empty gondolas awaiting the settlement (partial settlement, rather. No strike was ever actually settled) of the miners' walkout. This gives a ray of hope. And another thing I often think about in emergencies—of which these times hold nothing else but—the best times the world has ever known have succeeded periods as bad as the present one or worse. I won't massage you with that notion.

A little dungaree-clad boy who, when he grins, seems to display several hundred teeth, comes and stands at my elbow with his hands tucked into the bib of his coveralls, and watches me write. I am violating no confidence when I say he isn't helping me a bit. But I endure him and keep my goat. I am even softy enough not to write this while he is looking, if he were old enough to read it or understand. For I have a keen recollection of the time when I too was what is known as a brat and made a fairly good stagger at being what too many grownups call a nuisance. Anybody who can't remember when he was a nuisance is still more or less of one.

There is a lady across the aisle from me who has had the porter put her hat and her suit case up into the baggage rack. You can tell the hat from the suit case because it is smaller. But one looks just as much like a hat as the other.

I heard a good one on a recent trip. Riding with some railroad folk to New Castle, Pa., where a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad celebration of some kind was toward, a lady connected with the railway service told me an incident of the some-years-ago visit of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter Ishbel. The lady narrator—Miss Margaret Stevens—gave Ishbel the unique experience of talking by telephone to the engineer of the train, from the Pullman. After the inevitable anxious British telephonic inquiry "Ah you theah?" Ishbel settled down to asking naive questions that much amused the engineer in question. And after the lady had accompanied her distinguished father back to England, the "hoghead" asked the lady railroader:

"What's the address of that Isabel woman?"

"You mean Ishbel MacDonald?"

"Yes, I guess that's her name."

"Why, you can reach her in London, England. Why do you wish the address?"

"Oh, I just want to send 'er sumpin."

"Send her what?"

A few weeks later the engineer again came to the lady railroader, with a long and lugubrious face.

"What's wrong?"

"Oh, that Isabel woman. I wrote to 'er an' even sent 'er a present and she never acknowledged it."

"What did you send her?"

Destructive Quarrel

By Ernest K. Lindley

Business Vs. New Deal

DR. GEORGE GALLUP'S latest poll confirms emphatically a condition of the public mind which must have been sensed by every political observer who keeps his eyes and ears open and strives for a measue of objectivity.

Dr. Gallup finds that 54 per cent of the voters do not think the Roosevelt Administration is friendly enough toward business and that 63 per cent think the attitude of the Roosevelt Administration is delaying recovery.

But he also finds that 65 per cent of the voters think business is not friendly enough toward the Roosevelt Administration, and that 69 per cent think the attitude of business is delaying recovery.

(In all four cases these are the percenages of those who have definite opinions—after deducting approximately one-eighth of all persons polled because they were undecided.

Business Blamed More Than New Deal

BUSINESS, it will be noted, is blamed more than the Roosevelt Administration. And, according to Dr. Gallup, 54 per cent of the Republicans who answered held that business was not friendly enough to the Roosevelt Administration.

Both business and the Roosevelt Administration are blamed, nevertheless—each by a substantial majority—and a considerable number of voters obviously blame both with impartiality.

Nothing in this particular test indicated whom the various persons polled regarded as the spokesmen for business or in which particulars they took exception to the Roosevelt Administration's treatment of business. This was a test of the public impression of the general relations between business and the Roosevelt Administration. It produced a clear warning that a great segment of the public is fed up with what it believes to be an unnecessary and destructive quarrel.

It is a fair deduction that this great segment of the public deplores the kind of "war-to-the-death" cries sounded by the United States Chamber of Commerce at its recent annual convention, or by Tom Girdler in his address a few days ago as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Administration Adopts Appeasement Policy

THE ROOSEVELT Administration also has been remiss in its publicity. I say "publicity" because it is difficult to put a finger on recent specific actions of the Roosevelt Administration which can be regarded as hostile to business. Prior to the 1938 election, and especially during Mr. Roosevelt's first term, many reforms—such as the securities act, the public utility holding company act and the national labor relations act—brought the Administration into direct conflict with important sectors of the business community. During those years oratorical attacks on business were frequent—although "breathing spells" and eras of good feeling were proclaimed at psychological moments. The attack on business probably reached its peak in the maladroit antimonopoly speeches of the winter and spring of 1937—a line of attack engineered by the inner circle of the New Deal and one which unfortunately threw for a loss one of the most capable and promising New Deal candidates for President, Robert H. Jackson.

During the last 12 months, and especially since the 1938 election, the Administraiton's policy, in substance, has been aimed at a better understanding with business.

The President has recommended no new reforms disturbing to business.

Contrary to widely advertised prophecies, the TNEC—the monopoly inquiry—has gone about its work in a sober and studious manner.

An agreement was reached for the settlement of the TVA controversy with the Commonwealth & Southern by the purchase, at a generous price, of the properites of this private utility which lie in TVA territory.

WPA has been cleansed of politics and fumigated.

Flesh Is Willing But Spirit Is Weak

THE NATIONAL Labor Relations Board has responded to criticism by revising some of its procedures and by acknowledging, at long last, that an employer caught between rival unions should have the right to appeal to the National Labor Relations Board to determine with whom he should bargain. The President, moreover, has appointed to the board Dr. William Leiserson, a man who has won the confidence of both employers and employes in his long career in supervising labor relations and is exceptionally qualified to soften the excessively legalistic approach of the NLRB and impart to its operations a more practical and constructive character.

With the approval of the President, Secretary Morgenthau has laid before Congress certain suggestions or hints (not recommendations) for tax revisions designed to encourage business.

In substance, the Administration's program since the 1938 election has been aimed at business "appeasement." The word is still under the ban in the New Deal. Business encouragement or business stimulation are better phrases. Business recovery is the best. But "appeasement" is good enough.

In some instances, as in that of the Morgenthau-Hanes tax program, the Administration has acted with reluctance, or with the appearance of it. Nevertheless, it has offered much more "appeasement" than it has advertised.

Its approach to a better understanding with business seems to be a case in which the flesh has been willing but the spirit weak.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Some Pre-Campaign Thoughts

READING last week the various speeches on policy—that of the President, and the debate between Senators Vandenberg and Minton—leads one to think that the failure of American recovery is not being correctly or courageously analyzed in any political quarters.

A year ago our economy was in the depths of a severe depression or "recession" as we euphemistically called it. I think there is no question—it is now generally agreed—that this depression was due to a curtailment of Federal spending plus other deflationary measures undertaken by the Government. One must gather that that Government itself had been listening to the opposition, which was painting large the menace of inflation.

The opposition and others also criticized at that time the tax on undistributed profits as punitive, and held it partially responsible for stagnation.

Since then the tax on undistributed profits has been reduced to a mere shadow. The Government resumed deficit spending, undid its strictures on reserve requirements and remonetized the previously sterilized gold, and production responded.

General Sagging Still In Evidence

NOW WHETHER this was due to the credit policy, or the spending policy, or the taxation reform, the fact is that the recovery was of short duration.

In the first quarter of 1939 it was already hesitating. At the close of the quarter there was a sharp decline in stocks and there has been no notable "spring upturn" but a general sagging.

There is much evidence that the halts in our economic recovery are due to the disturbed international situation. The collapse in the market in March, 1938, accompanied the occupation of Austria; the break in September, 1938, was synonymous with the Czech crisis; the fall of Barcelona in January corresponded with another market break; and during the decline of March, 1939, Bohemia and Memel were being occupied.

That our economy in some measure, and possibly in considerable measure, is a reflection of deteriorated international relations seems indicated—and this in spite of the fact that our export trade has not relaxed but has maintained itself excellently, while financially we have been attracting European capital, and that capital has not been liquidated.

Too Great Emphasis On New Deal Policies

THE FACTS do not speak well for all the criticisms of the Administration. The facts would seem to indicate that too great importance has been attached by the opposition to the surplus profits tax, that a drastic reduction of Government investment and spending did, and would again, bring about another recession, and that the constant advice to the President to leave Europe alone and to mind our own business indicates that we do not always see just where our business is.

Had the President not made it very clearly known to the world that we were not disinterested in the shock after shock emanating from Germany, it is as nearly certain as anything can be that we would have had a whole succession of week-end coups. Certainly Poland was on the list, and the date has at least been postponed—undoubtedly due to the sudden rally of something like world solidarity.

If, now, the Morgenthau-Hanes tax-reform program is accepted in substance by Congress and is not followed by a substantial increase in private investment, the opposition will be out on a limb. For what then—according to the opposition argument—will be hindering the 20 largest corporations, let us say, from expanding, reinvesting their cash holdings, which, in some corporations at least, are very large, and so creating new employment opportunities?

Opinion, which has been increasingly sympathetic to business, may undergo another of its shifts, convinced that business has been complaining without having a constructive program to offer in place of the present one.

Campaign Attacks Might Aid Dictators

ABROAD, in Great Britain and France, there is apprehension that the 1940 campaign may concentrate an unmeasured attack on the Administration's foreign policy. If it does, the dynamic expansionist states will certainly exploit it for all that it is worth, and the Hamilton Fishes will be worth a dozen Fritz Kuhns to them. It is even possible that they will mark time in anticipation of a Republican victory and use that moment to strike.

If they should, that would be most unfortunate for a new Republican Administration, for it would be held responsible for a world catastrophe and would enter office with no possible chance of fulfilling a single one of its campaign promises, certainly not any promise to return to a more free economy! For the very attempt to keep out of war would entail a greater amount of Government control than we have ever had!

Governor Landon, I think, and other responsible Republican leaders realize this—realize that a wide-open party split over foreign policy might be disastrous.

And from a domestic viewpoint it would also be unfortunate, because it would turn the campaign into an ideological fight of peculiar nastiness and danger.

The place for the opposition to concentrate is where this Government is really weak—namely, in the acrimonious spirit of its attacks on business and in the administration of its reforms.

Federal Malpractices Need Honest Airing

TO ATTACK spending or Government investment per se will get us nowhere. But the manner of spending—the absence of adequate standards, criteria and long-range vision; the failure of Government enterprises to set for themselves even the same standards that they require of business—Business ought to appoint its own SEC to investigate and publicize Government malpractices—the introduction of partisan politics into fields from which common honesty demands that partisan politics be rigorously barred; the lack of consistency, rationality and planning throughout a system that presented itself as an experiment in planning; the evil effect of the agricultural program on the very classes that this Government has set out to save—for instance, upon the share-croppers in the South—here there is a field for meticulous investigation and careful reporting to the public which will bear fruit.

The continuous and undifferentiated attacks on business, the repeated and expensive "hearings" which actually reveal nothing, the shifts in policy which accompany each change in personnel, and the repeated changes in personnel; the chaos in labor relations; the tendency of the President to govern with a more or less anonymous set of advisers instead of with his responsible Cabinet; the succession of unexpected shocks—most notable among them the bill for reorganizing the Supreme Court and the fact that the Administration policy on this point has not changed—these are psychological factors which have contributed as much as any economic measures to the lag in recovery.

Heart Taken Out Of Private Enterprise

AFTER ALL, a Nation's production is only the sum of its employed energies. And it must be said of this Administration that although it has not taken the profits out of private enterprise, it has contributed to take the heart out of it. It has taken the fun out of it and the prestige out of it.

Indeed, the Administration's continual emphasis on the nefarious profit motive has blinded it to the manifoldness of the motives that enter into any creative activity.

But a criticism along these lines presupposes that the opposition is, actually, more rational than the Administration, and the showing in Congress hardly indicates it.

For the opposition to fail to recognize a few basic changes in the American temper during the past years will be unfortunate.

This Administration has assumed that the rich in this country have been too rich, and the poor too poor; that the Government was, for several decades, largely the instrument of the most powerful banking houses, corporations and wealthier landowners, rather than representative of the people as a whole; that there is no territory of life into which Government is not justified in going if its entrance is necessary to prevent collapse; that if private capital, for any reason, becomes so timid that the wheels slow down toward the stopping point, the public credit must be used to start them again.

And in foreign affairs it has held that the United States has a definite interest in the maintenance of peace and law, even outside its own borders, and that it would be a mistake if gamblers, risking war for national aims, should count on our indifference.

Foes Encourage Social Strife

THIS GENERAL attitude is still held, I dare say, by a majority of the American people, and nothing is likely to happen in the next few months to lead them to relinquish it.

The opposition can show that so far as domestic affairs are concerned, this attitude remains largely platitudinous. It has not succeeded in giving us a healthy agriculture, or notably reducing unemployment, or adequately enhancing national income.

It has permitted, and even at times demagogically encouraged, social strife.

But if the opposition really attacks platitudes with other—and worse—platitudes, it will disappoint millions who are looking for constructive criticism and a constructive program.

King's Speech At Victoria

Room For Pioneering

Canadian Press.

Victoria, B. C., May 30.—The text of the address by King George VI today at the luncheon given by the British Columbia government:

THE QUEEN and I have crossed Canada from east to west, from ocean to ocean, and stand now on the shores of the Pacific.

Your kind words, Mr. Premier, have set the seal on the wonderful welcome that has been given to us at every stage of our long westward journey.

I thank you for them; and here, at Canada's western gateway, I thank all those thousands of Canadians whom we have seen since we landed at Quebec, for the loyalty and affection that they have offered so generously to us both.

To travel through so grand a country is a privilege to any man; but to travel through it to the accompaniment of such an overwhelming testimony of good will, from young and old alike, is an experience that has, I believe, been granted to few people in this world.

We are deeply grateful for it; we shall never forget it; and the inspiration it has given us will hearten and encourage us for the rest of our lives.

Canada's Vastness Impresses Monarch

IN THE COURSE of this journey I have seen the old settled parts of the Dominion which have a long history behind them, and I have seen the newer parts, of which the first settlement is still within the memory of living man. When I remember that here I am as far from Ottawa as Ottawa is from London, I realize something of the vastness of Canada. When I saw the broad plains, changed by the pioneers to the uses of man, and the mighty mountain ranges through which they cut their roads, I began to understand the qualities of the Canadian people.

For most of you, the present task must be the development of the heritage already secured by those who have come before. Nevertheless, in this vast land, you have also still before you the rewards of pioneering and the prizes of exploration. You have only touched the fringes of the great north. Once those northern wilds were considered of little value, except as the home of fur-bearing animals. Now they are being surveyed and mapped, and settled so far as settlement is possible. Valuable mines are being worked right up to the Arctic Circle. There in the north is a field of enterprise for youth which it will take generations to exhaust. I could only wish that it had been possible for me to make a trip into that region which holds so much of Canada's future.

A Thoroughfare Between Hemispheres

HERE, ON THE SHORES of the Pacific, I can realize the position which Canada occupies. Her Atlantic windows look to Europe, her Pacific windows to Asia and the Far East. As science reduces the barriers of space, this country will become a thoroughfare between two hemispheres. Some day the peoples of the world will come to realize that prosperity lies in co-operation, and not in conflict. With the dawn of that brighter day, I look to Canada playing an increasingly important part in furthering friendly relations between the East and West. With the widening of her role of international interpretation will come corresponding benefits to mankind.

D. C. Students Among Graduates

Gladys Anne Carter and Ruth Ellen Carter, of Washington, were among senior class students at Mt. Vernon Seminary participating yesterday in class day ceremonies preliminary to today's commencement exercises.

After the reading of the class history, prophecy, and "the last will and testament," the award for highest academic standing for the year was presented to Miss Denise Coblentz. Joint winners of the good citizenship prize were Miss Frances Magill and Miss Patricia Fowler, and the art award went to Miss Julia Block.

Colored School Teachers to File

Applications for teaching positions in District evening colored schools are scheduled to be filed by 1 p. m. Saturday, Howard H. Long, chief examiner for Divisions 10 to 13, said yesterday.

Credentials of candidates for six types of teaching licenses will be examined this summer, Long said. The licenses include classroom teachers for the first three grades, teachers for grades three to eight, music and sewing teachers in the elementary schools, craft teachers and art teachers in the vocational schools, and high school teachers.

Labor Ills Laid To Arms Race

Winant Laments State Of 'Near-War'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Geneva, Switzerland, May 30.—John G. Winant, American director of the International Labor Office, today issued his first annual report, a document of unrelieved gloom, in which the rearmament race was shown to be the villain in a tragedy of declining wage rates, increased hours of work and general lowering of safety, production and efficiency standards.

The former Governor of New Hampshire and first chairman of the Social Security Board declared that the present state of "near-war" was liable to prove as devastating economically as war itself, "in a slower though no less certain way."

"Rearmament cannot continue at the present rate of acceleration without eventually absorbing so much of the national income of many countries as will prove intolerable," he said.

JOHN G. WINANT

'Adds To Cost Of Bread'

"A point may come when defense expenditures will cause actual starvation in the lower income groups.

"We know these (rearmament) costs are added to each loaf of bread we buy, to every acre of land we cultivate, and to the length of the day we labor to earn a living. . . . The present state of armed peace means the speeding up of production, a concentration of productive energies on nonproductive activities, the diversion of groups of the population to military service."

He pointed out that the speed up of production results in diminished efficiency, longer hours, danger to workers' health and safety and the jeopardizing of legislative and collective agreements for workers' protection.

Noting a widespread tendency for international economic improvement, Winant dwelt on the setback delivered by war preparations. In Germany, he pointed out, one-third of the total population is covered by "work-books," without which employment is impossible. Regulations forbid the employer from dismissing a worker, nor may the employe seek another job without permission from the labor office. Every person, regardless of age or sex, must be placed by his employer at the state's disposal on demand.

Says Wages Are Up In U. S.

Hourly wage rates, he said, have risen from the 1929 level in every country save Germany and Japan. Although earnings, i. e., real, as opposed to money wages, have risen in the United States, United Kingdom, France, Belgium and Sweden from the 1929 figures, they have declined in Germany, Italy, Japan and Czecho-Slovakia.

Germany's drive for self-sufficiency was implicitly condemned in the report, which stated that German goods were "wasteful of labor in the sense that, by process of international exchange, the same or better products could be obtained with less expenditure of effort."

Winant noted a complete reversal in the German policy of removing women and children from employment by now insisting that all able-bodied persons of both sexes and all ages hold productive jobs. He also recorded a continued tendency to prolong the hours of labor in Germany. A ten-hour day, previously exceeded only "in exceptional cases for imperative reasons of public interest," may now be increased merely "in case of urgent need."

Turning to the United States, the report said that "persistent unemployment more than any other single factor destroys the great intangible assets—self-confidence, resiliency courage and determination—without which a community cannot progress."

No longer can men and women out of work be considered part of a Nation's labor reserve, Winant said, noting the "subtly undermining influence" of unemployment, so marked that the unemployment index is increasingly used as a yardstick for judging a nation's vigor and efficiency.

'Live In A State Of Intolerable Poverty'

The labor office estimated that in terms of the goods $1 would purchase in the United States between 1925-1934, the annual income of employed persons in the United States and Canada was $1,400, in Great Britain and Switzerland about $1,000, in Sweden, France, Denmark, Germany, Spain and Belgium between $700 and $600, in Poland, Italy and Japan between $400 and $300, in Russia about $350 and in China $120.

"If in a country such as the United States," the report concluded, "there is a 'submerged tenth' or submerged fifth, even, of families who are terribly poor, what can be said of the situation in countries where the average income is only a half or a quarter or a tenth of that in the United States? The great mass of mankind still live in a state of intolerable poverty. So long as this situation continues there can be no secure basis for peace in the world."

Winant said the labor office must be concerned with seeing that essential needs of national defense cut into living standards to the minimum possible degree. Two methods of attacking the problem were outlined. The first is to increase armaments by using unemployed resources as far as possible, not disturbing the ordinary peacetime activities. The second is to confine any restriction of other production, if such restriction cannot be avoided, to the fields which least jeopardize present and future living standards.

Referring to restrictions in other lands on consumption the report stated, "The widespread tendency of cutting down consumption and actually reducing living standards as a consequence of armament policies brings out the sharp contrast between this form of public spending and public spending designed as a recovery measure. Although both produce an initial increase in activity, the latter aims at stimulating consumption, whereas armament spending has to be accompanied by special measures to prevent any expansion of consumption and a rise in living standards."

Turning to the problem of refugees, the report vigorously challenged the thesis that the sole recourse for giving employment in other lands to those who fled their own is agriculture. Actually, it continued, the world's markets show very little sign of unfilled demand for farm products.

A majority of the refugees are industrial workers and their talents should be conserved, the report continued. With a decreasing population, demand for industrial products rises faster than for farm goods, and a general improvement of living standards also demands more industrial output, it was argued.

Tone Friendly To Democracies

Friendly in tone throughout to the democratic nations, and particularly to the United States, the report contains praise for Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade agreements, the wage-hour law, Government attempts to balance curtailed private spending by lending and spending itself, and the national labor relations act.

The report's charts, however, show that the United States falls badly behind other nations in progress since 1929 in the fields of building activity, employment, and industrial production.

Only Germany, however, where wage and price control are complete, has a better record in keeping the cost of living index stable over the last three years.

Your Figure, Madame!

Large-Boned Women Can Reduce Easily on 1,600 Calories a Day

ADD TO THE list of things it is not safe to ask a lady: "How much do you weigh?"

In the process of making up the new structure-weight chart, I fell into the bad habit of classifying practically everybody according to one of the three general types—slight, medium or large frame—to see how closely their weights tallied.

And, purely as a matter of mental routine, I asked an acquaintance with a large frame to tell me how tall she was and how much she weighed. Well . . . You'd think I'd asked how old she was or could I borrow ten dollars!

Wistfully Confesses

A very queer look came over her face and for a minute there was a chilly silence. Finally, in a tone which accused me of meddling with personal matters, she replied: "I don't know how tall I am. And I haven't weighed lately."

Of course, I hastened to assure her that with her large structure she wouldn't look well too thin (that being what I always say when I get myself in a spot), and that put us on a friendlier footing. She wistfully confessed that her weight was a touchy subject and that, really, she would like to weigh 20 pounds less.

Now, seriously, the woman with the large frame does not look well too thin, but when her weight goes beyond 10 per cent above normal, she appears unusually large, and knows it. Like my acquaintance, she would be a great deal happier for a little less weight. And, with just a bit of calorie management and an exercise plan, most of the large women can have really lovely figures.

Reduce on 1,600 Calories

If you are over 5 feet 7 and have a wide frame, you can reduce on 1,600 calories a day. Nobody could call that a diet! On that number of calories you can have almost everything you like. There are only about four important restrictions for this type reducer: Avoid the rich, high calorie desserts; never eat the fat part of the meat; use salt sparingly; limit water with the meals to one glass.

You do not need vigorous calisthenics, but you should exercise to firm the backs of the upper arms, strengthen the muscles supporting the bust and strengthen the abdominal muscles. Exercises with the arms held at shoulder level will help you to get rid of the flabby flesh on the backs of the upper arms and also will strengthen the pectoral muscles. For this type there is no better exercise than rowing. If you cannot row a boat try to get an inexpensive rowing machine.

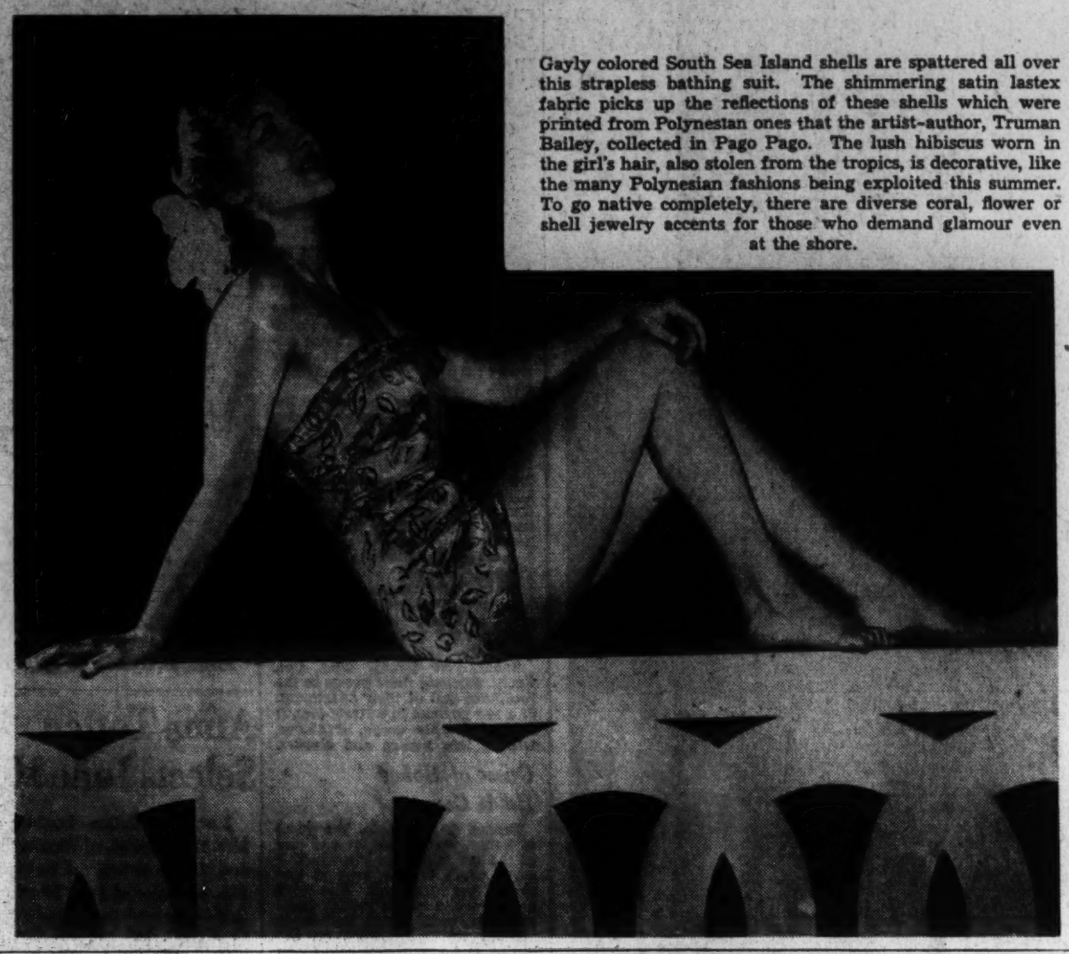
She Shall Wear Sea Shells Down to the Beach



Gayly colored South Sea Island shells are spattered all over this strapless bathing suit. The shimmering satin lastex fabric picks up the reflections of these shells which were printed from Polynesian ones that the artist-author, Truman Bailey, collected in Pago Pago. The lush hibiscus worn in the girl's hair, also stolen from the tropics, is decorative, like the many Polynesian fashions being exploited this summer. To go native completely, there are diverse coral, flower or shell jewelry accents for those who demand glamour even at the shore.

Some Terms In Chinaware Are Defined

Hobby Often Lasts For Life, So Words Ought to Be Known

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

In embarking on a career as a connoisseur of china, it's a good idea to get a few basic definitions in mind. Such as:

CERAMICS—This is the term used for all baked clay products, whether of china or earthenware.

POTTERY is a pretty vague word. Popularly it is used to designate the more primitive earthenware.

BISCUIT is the term used for the body composition of different types of ceramics.

EARTHENWARE is made of a less refined grade of clay than is used for china and porcelain. It has less feldspar in the formula and is not translucent.

CHINA AND PORCELAIN are, correctly used, the same thing. Often, however, the word porcelain is used commercially to apply to a good grade of earthenware.

HOME CHINA is made of a china formula with bone ash added.

KAOLIN is the fine white clay used to make any ceramic products. To it are added quartz and feldspar in varying amounts, according to the quality of ware being made.

VITREOUS is the term applied to china that has been baked at a high temperature till all the ingredients are thoroughly fused and tempered.

FIRING is the term used to describe the process of baking the ware in a kiln or oven to vitrify, set the shape and make permanent the colors.

GLAZE—This is a wash or dip applied to the shaped piece which gives it a hard, nonporous usable surface.

Love Is Wonderful, but Respect Enhances Its Value, Says Reader Who Decries Bachelor's Philosophy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am of the opinion that there is something of the cad about a man like "Also Interested," (your correspondent of May 24), who spends his bachelorhood soliciting favors from numerous women friends and finds amusement in the various methods they use to resist him. Unless I am very much mistaken, he belongs in aclass with the "debauchee," whom you admitted should be thrown out on his ear.

Marriage is still the most satisfactory offer any man can make a woman, and the woman who lets herself be flattered into accepting any other kind of arrangement is a fool. The average Washington bachelor is a congenital roue whose attitude toward the girl who lives alone in an apartment is no more of a compliment than an alcoholic's fondness for liquor is a tribute to the bartender.

Perhaps I am wrong, but I do believe there are still a few persons left in the world who do not consider "off-the-record" relationships a "credit" to either of the parties involved. As for a "devoted friendship" continuing after one of these affairs is over, it seems to me that even your most blase readers will have to admit that it would be a friendship with a rotten taste, to say the least.

This "eat-your-cake-and-have-it-too" formula for living, practiced by about 80 per cent of the unmarried men in Washington, is definitely not all it is cracked up to be. After all, the best way for a man to gain access to a girl's apartment is not by means of the "mutual aid society," nor the "good old charitable offer," but through the door of matrimony. Love is the most wonderful thing in the world, Mary, but there is something more needed in a first-class human relationship. Perhaps your readers have heard of it. It's called Respect. Remember?

OLD TIMER.

These Man-Chasing Women

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It is regrettable that "Virginian," (your correspondent of May 23) should be labeled mid-Victorian simply because he disapproves of women pursuing men. I have observed that it is the comparative newcomers to Washington—the women and girls from other cities and States—who act in such manner, as a rule

There are hundreds of native Washington girls who would never dream of doing such a thing; much less of calling a man on the telephone to extend an invitation of any kind whatsoever. Yes, even in this modern age, there are girls who would never abandon their pride nor forget their training to the extent of chasing a man. As a rule, these are the girls who enjoy more popularity than the other kind. Look among your own acquaintances for evidence.

On the other hand, why not be tolerant? Perhaps such invitations are motivated by kindness. So many people come to Washington only to discover they have no acquaintances here. And if a girl were to extend an invitation to a lonely man who found himself in that position, I should imagine he would be grateful.

If "Virginian" will wait a while, I feel certain that he will meet a number of girls who have had the same training as he has had; the kind which, I, too, feel is proper. Thank you kindly for the interesting letters published in your column. TWENTY ONE.

Behind the Eight Ball

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Without doubt you are the most selfish person who ever wrote advice to persons with problems. I came to this decision after reading your reply, of May 25, to "P. R. G.," the 19-year-old girl who finds herself in love with, and loved by, a married man 20 years her senior—a man whose home life is unbearable, because his wife drinks incessantly and has no affection for him.

Just because a man has made a mistaken marriage, you seem to think he should be punished for life, and that this punishment should be extended to ruin the lives of two other persons. Well, I say you are all wrong. He will get a divorce. His wife will be happier. He will be happier. The young girl will be happier. And you can just go climb a tree. So there.

ANONYMOUS.

A Vote of Confidence

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After having read "Pat P.'s" letter (of May 19) and your reply, I want to say that I think your advice (to confide in her mother) is excellent; and I might suggest, further, that she have her mother get in touch with you. I have to know of other cases, similar to others, where the persons in distress conferred with you in working out emergency plans, which were later carried through to successful conclusions. I want to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation for the work you are doing, and if at any time I can be of service to you, I am yours to command. Sincerely,

GRATEFUL ADMIRER.

A Word to the Wise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I think I know the young physician whom "Perplexed," (your correspondent of May 16) is so madly in love with, and who says he will never love her. And I want to tell her that this attitude of his is part of his line, intended to get the girl crazy about him. As for his alleged unhappy former love affair, when he was an interne—well, he has just about broken that girl's heart. This man is cruel and selfish. He must have led "Perplexed" on, since she has fallen so hard. My advice to her is to forget him; he's mean.

World's Fair Phone Exchange Handles All Calls for Show

New York, May 30.

ONE OF THE most interesting places at the World's Fair is the big telephone headquarters which handles all the calls of the show. Incidentally, if you want to get Maizie, one of the girl's in Billy Rose's Aquacade, just ring World's Fair 6-1212, and if you get a hot dog stand, hang up.

ALICE HUGHES

No less than 54 girls work on the big switchboard, and on the heaviest day to date more than 75,000 calls were handled. The chief operator is a very pretty girl named Gladys McCa[illegible], who achieved her difficult and important job after a long period of ordinary hello-good-by. Naturally the questions that pour into this big exchange are extraordinary. One entire division does nothing but handle so-called information questions, and it is to this board that most of the crackpot queries come. Here are a few samples, just to show you what the girls go through:

"Do you know who handles peageants? . . . Do you admit visitors on roller skates? . . . Can I speak to someone in the Nudist Colony? . . . What time is the Fair lighted up? . . . I want to speak to Grover Whalen . . . Will you tell me where I can find some tourist camps for people coming from Boston?" After a few weeks of these I shouldn't be surprised if the young ladies were quietly taken away somewhere to cool off for a few weeks. But, of course, the patience of telephone operators is limitless and proverbial.

One of the chief services of the Fair, and one which is often asked the phone girls, is the furnishing of wheel-chairs to invalids by the show. All in all, there is no busier and more colorful spot at the Fair than the telephone exchange, but I shouldn't suggest visiting it. Gladys and her 54 girls are mighty busy.

There is a report here that Dorothy Lamour will pack her sarong and come to New York next fall to do a Broadway stage show—a story which is causing hundreds of young men to take interest . . .

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: When you come to town you may go to a baseball game at the Polo Grounds, which is where the National League Club called the Giants holds forth. If you do, and then go to a lunchroom near the ball park you may see a girl who looks vaguely familiar. She is. The lady was one an actress and was quite famous as a glamour girl of her day. Now she is dealing them off the arm, which is considerable of a change . . .

The Gentler Sex

Male Stylist

"Now, I want you to tell me the truth, George, about what you think of this dress."

"Wait a minute . . . Turn around . . . Say, what's that hanging down there in the back?"

"Oh—that's only my slip showing."

"Is it going to be that way?"

"Of course not I'm going to shorten it. What I want to know is what you think of the dress?"

"Another thing—that left stocking seam of yours is twisted about three-quarters of an inch to the left."

"Oh well, I'll straighten it—if that makes any difference."

"Oh well . . . now is it all right?"

"Ye-es. Only you've scuffed your shoe at the back."

"I'll get that fixed. Now what about the dress?"

"Say, that slip's showing in front too!"

"I know it! It's too long for this dress. Wait . . . I'll pin it up—if that'll make you happier. Now will you PLEASE look at the dress?"

"I'll tell you one thing—that belt's crooked!"

"I know. Its too big. I'm going to set the fastenings over if I keep the dress. But now about the dress itself—"

"Say, what's that white string up there at the neck?"

"Oh, that's the price tag. Wait I'll stick it in. Now then, how does the dress look?"

"Walk out there and let me see you . . . Say, I can tell you one thing—you toe in too much when you walk!"

"All right . . . Is this any better?"

"Where? . . . Oh, that's a raveling! I'll get it. Now what about the dress?"

"Walk out there again—wait, now you're toeing out too much. Why don't you walk on a straight line?"

"Oh—all right! Does this suit you?"

"That's better . . . only . . . "

"Well now, tell me—would you keep the dress or wouldn't you?"

"Say, do you know one thing? You've taken on some weight in the hips?"

"I have NOT! This is a size 16 and see how perfectly it fits!"

"Well now there's no use for you to get mad about it. I'm just telling you this for your own good. Another thing, you're letting your stomach sag—"

"It's just this old girdle—"

"Girdle! You wouldn't have to wear a girdle if you'd take the proper exercise."

"Well, I've just been so busy and it's been so hot . . . but I'm going to right away—"

"Yes, you see it's beginning to show. And another thing you're slumping in the shoulders—"

"I'll do something about that too—if you'll just look at this dress. Please tell me what you think of it."

"Well now, let's see . . . Walk out there again . . . Say, let me tell you something else—you'd better take some leg exercises. You're getting a little flabby—"

"Say George, will you do just one thing for me?"

"What?"

"Will you get your mind off of everything else for just one minute and tell me what you think of this DRESS?"

"What? . . . The dress? . . . Oh . . . I guess it's all right . . . only . . . Say! That right stocking seam's a little off too!"

Excavated Buns For Egg Cookery

If there are buns left from the picnic they can be made into egg bunnies. Remove part of centers from 6 buns to form cups. Brush top and inside of buns with salad oil. Break an egg into each bun; season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with ½ cup buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven, 325 degrees, for 25 minutes, or until eggs are firm and buns are slightly browned. Melt ½-pound diced spreading cheese in double boiler; add 2-3 cup milk and thoroughly blend. Serve over the buns. Garnish with parsley. Serves six.

Cosmopolitan Menu Is Simple

My Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

ONE ADVANTAGE with food is that you can be so cosmopolitan. You can travel all over the wrold and still be at home. Grapefruit juice and apple pie are truly American, but how well they blend with spaghetti and sauce from Italy, and a tossed green salad from France!

Menu

Chilled Grape Juice

Spaghetti With Meat Balls

Cook 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons olive oil, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 4 medium-sized onions and 4 cloves of garlic together in a skillet. Add 2 small cans tomato puree, 4 cans Spanish sauce or tomato paste, and 2 teaspoons Worcestershir sauce and bring to a boil. Fry 1 pound ground beef until well browned and add to sauce. Simmer over very low heat 3 hours. Cook 2 pounds Italian spaghetti in boiling salted water; rinse with hot water and drain. Place on warm serving platter, pour sauce over top and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. Serves six.

Society Marks Holiday In Comparative Calm

The French Ambassador Entertains; Mr. and Mrs. Dunn Give Farewell Party for Countess de Baillet Latour

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

COMPARATIVE CALM—before the whirlwind of events that soon will center around royalty and debutantes—accented the social calendar yesterday when a number of Capitalites went a-holidaying out of the city, and a number of others took their partying here in small and informal doses.

Enlivening what might otherwise have been a lagging social round, however, was the dinner given last evening by the French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, who entertained 35 guests at the embassy on Kalorama road. In the company was his cousin, Viscountess de la Noue, who came to this country to attend the opening of the French pavilion at the World's Fair and will be here for two weeks.

Ranking guests at the event were the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil; Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Danish Minister and Mme. Wadsted, and Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg.

Others in the company were Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Miss Josephine Patten, Mrs. John Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Archie Lochhead, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol of the State Department; Miss Marian Trumbull, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Maj. Gist Blair, and, from the staff of the Embassy, Jacques Truelle, Minister-Counselor; the Naval Attache and Mme. Benech; the Air Attache and Mme. Weiser; Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary, and the Third Secretary and Mme. Charles Lucet.

James Clement Dunns Give Farewell Fete

Another dinner on last evening's calendar was the farewell fete given by Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn in honor of their daughter, Countess Guy de Baillet Latour. The latter originally had planned to sail this week for her home in Brussels but has postponed her departure until June 13.

Since her schedule from now until then is already crowded, however, her parents gathered in a number of her friends last evening for the first of many farewell parties that will be given for her. The dinner, followed by dancing, took place on the terrace of the Dunn residence on Observatory Circle.

When the countess sails she will be accompanied by her younger sister, Miss Cynthia Dunn, who will visit her for several weeks. Upon her return, Miss Dunn will go with her parents either to North East Harbor or Isleboro, Me.—they have not yet decided which.

Lady Leslie Is Dinner Hostess

Still another party on last evening's schedule was the dinner given by Lady Bradford Leslie in her new apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. She recently moved there after spending the winter at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Guests of honor at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Williams, brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Henry Jewett. Others there included Mrs. Jewett, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Admiral Harley H. Christy, Edward Flater and Walter Wilcox.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt and Miss Louise Arner Boyd are at the Ritz-Carlton in New York, where they went on Sunday. Early in June Miss Boyd, noted geographer and explorer who visited Mrs. Roosevelt here a few days ago, will return to her home in San Rafael, Calif. . . . Mrs. Henry S. Downe, who has been visiting in Greensboro, N. C., and other Southern cities, has returned to Washington and will be at the Shoreham before going on to New York. She will visit friends in Newport and Southampton before sailing in the autumn for her home in Paris . . . The retiring Secretary of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Von Numers will sail today on the Gripsholm for Helsinki, Finland. They left Washington yesterday afternoon . . . Also sailing on the Gripsholm will be Mme. Eickhoff, wife of the Counselor of the Danish Legation, and her two children. The trio will spend the summer in Europe, where they will be joined later in the season by Mr. Eickhoff.

Eunice Ann Clark To Become Bride Next Wednesday

Mr. and Mrs. William Lake Clark have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Eunice Ann Clarke, to James C. Compton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Compton, of Portales, N. Mex. The ceremony will take place on Wednesday, June 7, at 6 p. m. in the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Josph Glotfelty will serve as matron of honor, and Miss Frances Clark, sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor. The bridesmaids are Miss Virginia Hall, of Elizabethtown, N. J., cousin of the bride-to-be; Mrs. Fred Clark, her sister-in-law, and the Misses Martha Liles, Hortez Winfrey, Margaret Hogan and Ethel Peden, all of Washington.

Mr. Compton will have Graves Howell, of Philadelphia, as his best man. The ushers will be Ben Brown, Emery Reed, Paul Tackett, Edwin Swope, Scott Mabrey, Charles and Robert McConnell, all of Washington.

Attend Party at World's Fair

Chatting on the balcony of the Ford exposition at the New York World's Fair, Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, former Washington resident, and Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, were snapped at a recent party attended by 75 prominent persons from social and artistic circles. Among notables in the company were Reginald Werrenrath, the singer; Dr. Albert E. Wiggam, psychologist and writer; Burton Holmes, dean of travel lecturers, and many others who entertained their fellow guests with impromptu performances.

Zannis Give Cocktail Party For Ghiraldos

One of Farewell Affairs for Argentine Counselor

By Elizabeth Henney.

While the languorous Latin atmosphere of the last few days settled on Washington yesterday afternoon, the Air and Military Attache of Argentina, Col. Pedro Zanni, and Senora de Zanni entertained at cocktails in their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

The event was another in the series of farewell parties being given for the Counselor of the Argentina Embassy and Senora de Ghiraldo. Senor Ghiraldo, who has just been appointed to be Minister from his country to five Central American countries, will leave Washington soon with Senora de Ghiraldo and their young son for their new station. Though he will represent his country in five places, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Guatemala Senor Ghiraldo's headquarters will be in Guatemala City.

Senora de Zanni, with Col. Zanni, received their guests in the reception hall of their apartment. She was gowned in a street-length model of aqua crepe, fashioned with a lace bodice and sleeves.

Guest of Honor Holds Court

Senora de Ghiraldo, the guest of honor, poured tea at one end of the tea table and later held a small court of her own at one side of the large hall. She wore a cool, white sports model, fashioned on straight lines, with large maroon wooden buttons on the bodice, and a pearl and gold acorn pin over one pocket.

The whole apartment seemed to be a riot of flowers. In the reception hall were vases of peonies and roses, gladioli and pale pink roses filled the drawing room. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Senora de Godoy, wife of the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy; Senora de Fuentes, wife of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, and Mme. Caro.

Many Notables Attend Event

Underwood & Underwood.
MRS. DANIEL R. QUINN

Sister Maid of Honor, Groom's Brother Is Best Man

White flowers and ferns flanked the altar when Miss Elizabeth Matilda Leake, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Payton Leake, of Washington, was married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock to Daniel Ray Quinn, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Quinn, of Marion, N. C.

The ceremony took place at Calvary Baptist Church, the Rev. William S. Abernethy officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown with a fitted bodice of white corded lace and a full skirt and train of net. Her net veil fell from a coronet of folded net and she carried white sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Alice Leake served as maid of honor for her sister, wearing a frock of chartreuse marquisette under a redingote of smoke gray. She wore a matching hair ribbon of velvet and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of mixed flowers. The bridesmaids were the Misses Emilie Miller, of Altoona, Pa., and Helene Blanchard, of Boonton, N. J., and little Glenda Quinn and Lee Quinn, jr., nephews of the bridegroom, served as flower girl and ring bearer. The bridesmaids and flower girl wore gray redingotes over orchid frocks, with matching velvet hair ribbons, and carried bouquets like that of the matron of honor.

Lee Quinn was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Fred S. Lawless, Roger W. Craven, William N. Petterson, jr., and Robert L. Sammons, all of Washington.

A buffet supper for members of the immediate families followed at the home of the bride's parents, 2733 Ontario road. The bride's mother wore a frock of black lace over a tearose slip, a black hat and a corsage of talisman roses. Mrs. Quinn was in navy blue sheer with orchids.

Couple to Live In Washington

Anne Totten Selects June 10

Miss Anne Totten, daughter of Mrs. Howe Totten, of Washington, and Howe Totten, of Baldwin, Md., has selected June 10 as the date of her wedding to Dr. George C. Merrill, son of Mrs. George Merrill, of Newport, R. I., and Stockbridge, Mass., and the late Rev. Mr. Merrill. The prospective bridegrom is a nephew of Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in historic St. John's Church and will be followed by a reception for members of the families and out-of-town guests at Mrs. Totten's place in Georgetown.

Miss Totten will have as her matron of honor and only attendant her sister, Mrs. C. E. Turney, of New Rochelle, N. Y. Lewis Cuyler, of Princton, N. J., will be best man, and the ushers will include John Nicholas Brown, of Providence, R. I., and John Rutherford, of New York. Others will be announced later.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Philadelphia.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Robert McConnell Returns With Tales of Lion Hunt

ROBERT E. McCONNELL, of Middleburg, is quite a celebrity around here since he returned from a three weeks' lion hunt in southwestern Utah. He accompanied James L. Clark, of New York, noted game hunter, and Waddell McFall, also of New York. The trio, who had with them Jack Butler, of Kanab, Utah, and his famous pack of hounds, killed five lions, the largest measuring more than 8 feet.

Mr. McConnell has a seemingly endless supply of thrilling stories about his lion hunting experiences, and his foxhunting friends are enjoying them, one by one.

MR. AND MRS. McConnell have with them now thier daughter, Miss Mildred McConnell, who is attending Miss Spence's School in New York. Miss McConnell will attend the wedding of Miss Jane Stevenson and Robinson McIlvaine to take place quietly in Middleburg on Saturday. She was presented to society during the Christmas holidays at a large ball at North Wales Club and is one of the loveliest young ladies in Virginia.

MRS. MELVILLE CHURCH 2d, who was injured on Monday while galloping her horse over a field near Warrenton, is suffering from cuts and bruises, but no bones were broken and it is hoped she will be well enough to ride in the Washington Horse Show this week-end.

THE HORSE SHOW, incidentally, is the subject of much interest in these parts. Scheduled for Friday, June 2, through Sunday, it is as usual sponsored by the Junior League of Washington; and, as usual, will draw a large number of entries from this part of the country.

According to F. Moran (Mike) McConihe, the largest entry list the show has ever had promises to make the event one of the most important of the season. Numbers of persons from the Virginia hunting country are planning to attend each day as spectators, and numbers of others will be there as participants.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney of Llangollen, near Upperville, will take the largest string of show horses from here. She has entered two hunt teams and her entries of eight horses, include such well-known one as Two Leggins, Bon Diable, Spring Hope, The Bear, Airy Spirit, Salterello, Nip and Faithful Heart.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, of Springbury, Berryville, will take six horses to Washington. They will show a hunt team and their entries include Sallyport, Brown Bruin, Hunter's Choice, Sly Portia, Billy Do and their sensational pony Victorian II.

Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee, of Middleburg, will show Dr. Yates and Glory Road.

OTHERS showing will be Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church 2d, who will take with their horses some entries of Miss Ruth Meyers, whose chestnut hunter, Report, is a noted show horse. Also showing will be Miss Patricia Downs, of Warrenton; Miss Jane Dodson, of Charlottesville; L. T. Piggott, of Purcellville; W. B. Bogert, of Keswick; Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Virginia; each; Tommy Leiter, George Plummer and many others from nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Mrs. Pere Wilmer Will Entertain At Country Home

Mrs. Pere A. Wilmer, of Washington, will entertain at luncheon Friday at the Wilmer country home near Leesburg, Va. Guests of honor will be judges of the Leesburg Flower Show which will be open to the public and will be held at historic Belmont, home of the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley on June 2.

The show is being given for the benefit of Loudoun County Hospital. Judges include Mrs. Thomas M. Fendall, Kenneth Gilpin, of Clark County; Mrs. J. V. Arthur, Winchester; Mrs. Joseph Walker, of Woodbury Forest; Mrs. J. O. Johnson, of Gordonsville, and Mrs. Duncan Brent of Baltimore.

Eric Baunl Visits Clarence Aspinwall

Clarence Aspinwall and his daughter, Mrs. John Glasscock Baldwin, have had as their guest for the past few days Eric Baunl, who recently left Vienna to make his home in this country. Mr. Baunl will return today to New York, where he is now living.

Mrs. Baldwin, who has been visiting her father since early in the spring, will leave next week to return to her home in San Francisco.

Justices Plan For Holidays

With summer heat beginning to settle down over the Capital, many of the Supreme Court Justices and their wives are making plans for holidays aftetr the court adjourns on Monday.

Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter are looking forward to a vacation in England, where the former is to be awarded a degree from Oxford University. They also expect to travel on the Continent. Before sailing they will be at their home in Cambridge, Mass., for which they will set off today.

Though they have set no date for closing their home on Nineteenth street, Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler will spend most of the summer at their country place in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Justice Owen J. Roberts will join Mrs. Roberts the first of the week at "Bryn Coed," their Pennsylvania farm, where she has been for the past fortnight.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who usually spend the summer motoring through New England and Canada, have as yet made no plans for the warm months, though, as the Chief Justice is still recuperating from his illness, it will be a quiet one. Associate Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas will remain at their home in nearby Maryland until later in the summer.

Smart Foreign Restaurants At N. Y. Fair Crowded

Back from New York with aching feet after touring the World's Fair ten hours a day for four days, our correspondent reports:

"The dinner given in the restaurant of the French pavilion to celebrate its opening was so jammed with celebrities, such as Lily Pons and Mrs. James Roosevelt, that among those turned away that night were only Doris Duke Cromwell, Franchot Tone and Grace Moore! Even some of the embassy attaches—the Charles Lucets, Commander and Mme. Pierre Benech and Lieut. Col. and Mme. Weiser—were obliged to huddle in the handsome Rumanian pavilion for their dinner.

"Though luncheon for two at the French pavilion came to $8, it was well worth while for the view of the illuminated fountains as one sat in the restaurant at the very top of the building. The entire front is made of glass, which can be pushed back when the weather is fine. Downstairs are exhibits of fine French lace, leather, jewelry, perfumes, and a copy of the train which Molyneux made for the Duchess of Kent to wear at her wedding.

"At the Rumanian pavilion, where the celebrated gypsy orchestra draws hundreds nightly, we saw M. and Mme. Popovici, who used to be with the legation here. M. Popovici, who is now consul in New York, said they would come down for the reception which the Minister will give next week. In one corner sat Florence Harris, who was telling friends that it wasn't tramping around the fair grounds so much as plodding through the marble-floored buildings which made her wish she could take her shoes off. She also confided that dinner for two in the Italian pavilion can cost $17.50. Florence had just come from the General Motors Building, where with a bevy of school children from the Bronx she had waited an hour and a half to get "in."

FROM DINT of living for several years in England, Robert Coe, of the State Department, possesses a gray topper and is NOT going to the British garden party. BUT he has already promised his hat to George Howe for the occasion. Mr. Coe will be in Long Island on that date to help his father, W. R. Coe, celebrate his seventieth birthday.

YESTERDAY was a day for picnics, and on practically any shady hill around Washington could be found an idyllic and bucolic group. The Assistant Secretary of State a c Mrs. Francis B. Sayre had a little picnic for some members of their family—Francis Sayre, jr., was home from college with a classmate, Andre Poulain, of France—the two latter leave today for a motor trip to the West Coast. Everybody played baseball or took hikes and lingered on smoking and chatting while the moon came up over the hills. The other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin King, who will be off this summer in their plane, also with California as the destination. Mr. King at one time held the distance and height records in aviation for both one seater and two-seater planes, of the same tiny type in which the ill-fated Thomas H. Smith took off on Sunday for a flight to Europe from Maine.

VISCOUNT DE ROHAN, who is here for the convention of automobile clubs now going on, is a friend and schoolmate of the French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin. Besides being president of the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs and president of the Automobile Club of France, he is an accomplished golfer, mountain climber and hunter. His family is one of the oldest in France.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, will give a dinner tonight in honor of Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, Minister of Paraguay, who will leave next month to assume his new duties as president of that country.

Representative and Mrs. Frank H. Buck entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham Terrace last evening. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Luther Gibson and Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Hara, of Vallejo, Calif., and Lieut. and Mrs. C. L. Clement.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson V. Shelton and their younger daughter, Vivian, have returned after spending several days in Atlantic City and Ventnor, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith entertained at their home Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth McCall, of California. Guests included Representative and Mrs. Henry Sheppard, Dr. Vladimir Rubar, of the Yugoslav Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lathrom.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Lashley have returned to their home in Sligo Park Hills, Md., after spending the week-end in Lancaster, Pa., where they visited relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Wells, of Silver Spring, Md., have with them the latter's niece, Mrs. Perry Lyons, of Marblehead, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fay Harper will return today to their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, after a holiday in Atlantic City.

Col. John C. O'Loughlin, of 1774 Massachusetts avenue, is at the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

Southgates to Sail For Europe Today

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate will sail for Europe today on the Manhattan, accompanied by their three young children, Patsy, Dickie and Sarah.

They will go directly to Paris, where they will remain for several weeks before taking a country house in France for the summer. Mr. Southgate will serve as European representative for Pan American Airways, and they will be abroad for an indefinite time.

Women's Press Club Host to Noted Writers

Mrs. Ridings Recently Proclaimed Outstanding Woman Poet of Her State; Mrs. Laura Krey Speaks on Regional Novel

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Two distinguished Texas writers were guests of honor yesterday at the final luncheon of the season for the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel. Hope Ridings Miller, the retiring president, presented as the guest speaker, Laura Krey, author of "And Tell of Time," and also her mother, Grace Dupre Ridings, who is here for a few weeks' visit.

Members of the club rose in tribute to Mrs. Ridings when her daughter announced that last week she had been awarded at the World's Fair in New York, a gold medal as the outstanding poet of her State. Her first book of poetry, "Shawl of Song," published in 1935, was followed, in 1936, by a second, "By the Light of the Lone Star," and she is now working on a third.

Mrs. Krey, who is a native of Texas but now a resident of Minnesota, devoted her talk to the regional novel, the demand for which is by no means filled, according to publishers, she said. A universal quality, a sense of time, and a feeling of the place, which brings an intuitive response, are the three requisites she named for such a book.

Book Should Be Regional by Accident

It should be regional by accident, rather than intent, she explained. The characters must live naturally in their surroundings and do what they naturally would do in a given situation, time and place—whether or not it is a sensible thing.

Discussing Southern novels because, she said, those were the ones with which she was most familiar, she pointed out that Southern airs superimposed upon the characters "would sit like postage stamps on a letter." She advised research for perfect familiarity with the movement of time in a given section—one of the most difficult things for a writer to encompass—for knowledge of dress and other details. But all of these must be secondary, she said, to the natural development of the story and the natural reactions of the people in it.

"The clock moves differently in different sections," she said, amplifying her reference to the movement of time. "The first thing people who write fiction must feel is how time moves around them. I tried to get a little of it in the preface of my book—and I rewrote it 15 or 20 times."

Author Never Satisfied With Work

Mrs. Krey's talk reflected the earnestness of her effort to make her work a faithful interpretation of the section and period with which she deals and her tireless endeavor to perfect her writing. She left her audience with a sense that she had set for herself a goal far beyond her present brilliant achievement — that her work would always be motivated by a desire to improve on what she had done before rather than by an author's hope to write a book that would sell.

She is now preparing a new novel of Texas in the period between 1820 and 1860. She believes the "great American novel" cannot be written in this country "until we have lived together a few hundred years longer." As to books on Washington, she said they were photographic rather than interpretive.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Miss Lili Rendy, of Budapest, who is on the staff of the newspaper Magyarorszag; Mrs. Joshua Evans, Miss Zelda Branch, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mrs. Carroll L. Stewart, of the Veterans' Administration; Mrs. Louise Caldwell and Miss Ruth Chalmers.

Y. W. Members Invited to Tea

The Young Woman's Christian Association this afternoon will have an informal tea at its summer residence, Vacation Lodge, near Cherrydale, Va., from 3 to 6.

All members have been invited, with admission by membership card. The committee in charge includes Miss Jessie Smith, chairman of the Y. W. C. A. membership department; Miss Kathryn Wilfley, Mrs. Earl Wilfley, Miss Marie Mague, Miss Louise Danforth, secretary of the membership department, and her assistant, Miss Patsy Murphy.

Members of the various chapters of the Y. W. C. A. who will pour include Miss Susan Craighill, president of Georgetown Chapter; Mrs. G. B. Markward, Mrs. G. W. Lyon, Mrs. R. L. Jarnagin, president of Chevy Chase Chapter; Mrs. J. H. Elvin, president of Princeton Chapter, Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams, a member of the board of directors and chairman of the chapter council; Miss Sara Motley, Mrs. Frank Davis and Miss Alice Dow. Tea will be served on the porch.

The hostesses for the occasion include Miss Mague, Miss Minnie Hunt, Mrs. Elsie Barger, Mrs. Maurice Weaver, Miss Jean Carr, Miss Florence Nichol, Miss Della Furzer and Mrs. F. R. Spencer.

The Young Married Women's Club will combine its meeting with the tea and the members will assist.

Tomorrow, young business women who expect to spend the summer, or part of it, at the lodge will move out.

Miss Joy Cutler is there again this year as the director and hostess. She is a graduate of Carthage College, Ill., and has studied voice at the Columbia School of Music in Chicago. Prior to coming to Washington she operated the Colonial Inn and tea room in Athens, Ohio.

Annual Business Meeting Friday to Climax Kensington Woman's Club's 40th Anniversary

Luncheon Scheduled At the Residence of Mrs. Earl B. White

Organization Has Had 157 Members Since Formation in 1899

The Kensington Woman's Club will hold its annual business meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. Earl B. White with her sister, Mrs. J. Stealy Elms, as hostess. A luncheon will precede the meeting at which Mrs. James E. Lamb, the president, will preside and which will climax the club's fortieth anniversary year.

The organization has a limited membership of 30 and through the 40 years has had 157 women of the community affiliated with it. The meetings are held in the members' homes, which is one of the reasons for keeping the number small and another is that all who belong must be residents of the town of Kensington.

The club, which antedated the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, was organized by Mrs. Eliza Bennett Hartshorn, (Mrs. Elden Hartshorn), who also started the Montgomery Federation of which she was the first president in 1905.

Highlights of the 40 years are given in a history of the Kensington Club written by Mrs. Edward A. Ferrell and given as part of the year's celebration. Interesting excerpts from it show it to be typical of the growth of the club movement in this section.

"In 1899 the town of Kensington had no paved roads, no electric lights, no street signs nor house numbers. There were many wells, pumps and windmills for there was then no Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission with its underground water and sewer system. There were no buses nor private automobiles, but the B. & O. Railroad served it well, and it had the Kensington Trolley, a distinctive asset in transportation at that time.

"The households of all the citizens were conducted in a similar manner. The men went to Washington to office, school or store, came home and made gardens and kept chickens, and there was even a cow or two in town and horses and buggies. The women were the housekeepers and home-makers, and there they stayed, for at that ume a woman's place was in the home. They lived quiet, uneventful lives, had time to visit with their neighbors and, when occasion required, put on white gloves and made some formal calls—generally to welcome newcomers to the town. They always went to church and sent the children to school and Sunday school.

"Occasionally, some ambitious lady would give a party. Then ice cream and cakes were made at home or, if it were a very special occasion, ice cream would be ordered in Washington to be delivered at Chevy Chase Lake, where the obliging conductor of the Kensington trolley would pick it up and deliver it at a designated street corner, where the man of the house or his helper would meet it and transport it by wagon or wheelbarrow to its final destination. There was no delivery from Washington.

"A matter of club legislation later was a request that the stores deliver in Kensington once a week. One merchant replied he would deliver once a week at the B. & O. station in Washington and one other would deliver through another designated place.

"Kensington was just a peaceful, sleepy town of nice, contented people who enjoyed life thoroughly; at this, they were until Mrs. Hartshorn came to town and began to tell the women how their sisters in the West were forming clubs and, in some places, even voting. She called on her neighbors and friends, talking and urging them to band together for mutual improvement.

And This Is the Early Clubwoman

"On October 20, 1899, we see a group of lovely young women, slim-waisted and modestly gowned, with high shoes, probably buttoned, which of course could not be seen, for skirts touched the ground, and also covered two or more petticoats. They had long hair, neatly rolled and pinned and topped by what to us today would be very funny hats. They gathered in the home of Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham. Among present members who attended that meeting were Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Harry C. Armstrong, Mrs. William E. Lewis.

"They decided to meet on Friday even though one protested it was her cleaning day and another that the hour interfered with her children's nap.

"In a few years, committees were formed to take steps for improvement in civic matters. Nothing escaped their watchful eyes, the ladies were fast becoming emancipated, and it was not long before their husbands were forced to band together for mutual protection. Thus was born the Married Men's Protective Association. This group watched smilingly from the sidelines for several years, entertaining the ladies uproariously and waited more or less patiently for their enthusiasm for club life to dwindle and die, but it did not."

By vote of the club on June 20, 1902, the "ladies" became "women" and have retained this designation since, Mrs. Farrell records.

One of the early requests of the club was that the town council order chickens to stay in their own yards. It helped the salary of the school janitor; canvassed the town for the support of the library, a project of paramount interest to the club throughout its history; favored the compulsory education law; worked for a woman member of the county school board; indorsed a bill against expectoration in street cars and sent a petition to the Maryland Legislature asking that the State be cleared of Anarchists.

In 1905 the club stated firmly it was not a suffragist organization and all political discussions were taboo.

The first donation of any club scholarship fund in the State of Maryland was the Kensington Club's gift of $25 in 1907. The original Montgomery Federation Loan scholarship was named in honor of the club's first president, The Eliza Bennett Hartshorn Loan Scholarship.

Promotes Many Civic Projects

Through the efforts of Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Wilson Townsend, the club is responsible for the playground, known as Kensington Meadows, now under the Maryland Park and Planning Commission. School gardens, a flag over the schoolhouse, the annual Christmas party for the colored school, Kengar; liberal support of philanthropic and educational undertakings of the county and State have been among their important projects.

Mrs. Farrell concludes: "Through the years we have grown much stouter, our shoe tops have become lower, our skirts have grown much shorter, our many petticoats have disappeared completely but still atop our graying heads are some very funny hats. Grasped firmly in our hands is the lighted torch of service and mutual improvement which we have carried so steadily through this first 40

Chevy Chase School Alumni to Hold Annual Banquet

Alumnae of Chevy Chase School from eleven States and the District of Columbia will attend the annual alumnae banquet to be held in the school dining room Friday night, it was announced today by Mrs. Frederic Ernest Farrington, regent.

Graduates of the classes of 1914, 1919, and 1929 will be honor guests. Miss Louise L. Newell, of Washington, dean emeritus, is in charge of arrangements.

At the head table will be Miss Pauline Sargent, of Lexington, Mass., president of the Chevy Chase Alumnae Association; Mrs. J. J. Chisholm, of Washington, secretary; Dr. P. M. Bail, president of the school, and Mrs. Bail; Miss Lucy Jamieson, dean; Miss Newell and Mrs. Farrington.

Reports on student activities for this year will be made by presidents of various clubs and organizations. For the glee club, Jean Billington; student council, Marion Silverstein; athletic association, Marion Farnum; the Barker, school paper, Zoe Ellen Young; social service club and the school annual, Layte Thomas Wheeler.

Riant Club to Close Season With Dance

The season's closing event for the Riant Club will be a dinner dance to be held at the Lafayette Hotel on Saturday. This will conclude the convention of the Washington and Baltimore chapters, which will be held at the hotel. The presiding officers at the convention will be Mrs. Marie Acker, grand president; Miss Thelma Erdman, grand treasurer; Miss Inna Barrett, grand secretary, and Mrs. Thekla Reinmuth, historian.

California State Society Plans Fete for Admiral and Mrs. Leahy

THE CALIFORNIA STATE SOCIETY will entertain with a breakfast party Sunday at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel in honor of Admiral William Leahy, chief of naval operations, who is retiring to become Governor of Puerto Rico, and Mrs. Leahy.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, representing the Army, and Admiral Christian J. Peoples, representing the Navy, will pay tribute to Admiral Leahy. Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals, president of the society, will preside.

Daughters of members of Congress, wearing crowns representing California fruits, will receive the guests and there will be a June birthday table with a cake, given by Mrs. Sheridan Downey, wife of Senator Downey. She and Mrs. John Tolan will be hostesses at the June table.

Special guests with Admiral Leahy's party will be Mrs. Albert Niblock, Mrs. Randolph H. Miner, Capt. and Mrs. Chester Wells, Lieut. and Mrs. William H. Leahy, Admiral Peoples, Gen. Hines and Gen. and Mrs. E. D. Scott.

Ellises to Be D. A. R. Hosts

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis will open their historic Virginia estate, Rippon Lodge, Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 for a garden party for the benefit of Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the fifth year they have given the affair for the chapter, of which Mrs. Ellis' sister, Miss Luella P. Chase, is regent. It is open to members of all D. A. R. chapters and their friends, and proceeds go to the patriotic and educational work of the Susan Reviere Hetzel group.

For the last four years, the chapter has provided a scholarship at Crossnore, N. C., one of the 17 D. A. R. approved schools, in the name of Molly Coffey, a mountain girl who was graduated from high school there in March. The money from the various chapters goes directly to the school, but is usually sent in the name of an individual student to whom the regent and other members write and send gifts, giving encouragement during his or her school course.

Molly is a protege of whom the chapter is proud. She made A grades in every subject throughout her four years with the exception of one B in one subject one semester. Membership of the Crossnore faculty consider her one of the finest students the school has ever graduated and she has won a scholarship to Lincoln Memorial University. Her letters to the chapter are always read at the meetings and begin, "My dear Susans."

THE ALUMNAE of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority will have their final meeting of the season tonight at the home of Miss Beatrice Clephane, 6000 Connecticut avenue. New officers, headed by Mrs. Robert Lohr, will be installed, with the installation ceremony followed by bridge.

Other new officers are Mrs. Linden Crone, vice president; Miss Mildred Norvell, treasurer; Miss Murial Whitehead, secretary; Mrs. W. Paul Briggs, corresponding secretary; Miss Adelaide Woodley, historian; Mrs. Edgar Withrow, Panhellenic delegate.

Hostesses for the evening are Mrs. Briggs, Mrs. Lohr, Miss Frances James, Miss Whitehead, Mrs. George Neal and Miss Clephane.

The annual dinner dance of the Alumnae Club has been announced for June 13 at the Army-Navy Country Club, with Mrs. Laurie Hess in charge of reservations.

MRS. LAWRENCE E. VOORHEES won the sweepstakes award for the most blue ribbons at the annual flower show recently held by the Chevy Chase (D. C.) Garden Club. The special award of the show went to Mrs. Frederick H. Untiedt. Mrs. Jay E. Fitzgerald won the special award for the best rose, and little Jane Wells won the blue ribbon in the junior exhibit.

Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle will be hostess at the next meeting June 12, at her home, 6200 Connecticut avenue. Luncheon will be followed by a trip to the Herb Farm. Mrs. Diller F. Groff, Mrs. Howard W. Phillips and Mrs. Elmer F. Cassell will be the assisting hostesses.

Educators Approve WPA Adult Classes

90% Answer 'Yes' In Independent Committee's Poll

Report of an outside appraisal committee that indicates almost 100 per cent approval of adult educational activities throughout the United States by the Works Progress Administration, shortly will be mailed to 3,700 members of the adult education department of the National Education Association.

This was reported yesterday by Miss Maude Aiton, principal of the Washington Americanization School, and former president of the adult education department of the N. E. A. She is now chairman of the department's legislative committee.

Widespread approval of WPA educational activities by mayors, executive heads of counties, and heads of State departments, Miss Aiton believes, should have an important bearing on proposed national legislation to establish State departments of adult education.

Represent 11 Groups

The appraisal committee was selected by representatives of eleven organizations interested in the kind of activities carried on by the WPA. Morton L. Wallerstein, of Richmond, Va., past president of the American Municipal Association, was chairman. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, Washington, was chosen to represent education. The committee reported early this month.

The question o n adult training was: "Have the educational activities been worth while?" To this 90 per cent of officials and executives answered in the affirmative, 8.5 per cent gave a modified affirmative, 0.8 per cent gave a modified negative answer, and 0.7 per cent gave a negative answer. In numbers, this represented 1,670 favorable answers, 43 modified favorable, 21 modified negative, and 13 negative.

A Typical Answer

Among typical answers was one from H. W. Harkey, chairman of the board of commissioners, Mecklenburg County, N. C., Miss Aiton said.

"There is a 1,059 colored and 1,181 white illiterate enrollment this year," he reported." "The 1930 census showed 1,516 white and 6,236 colored admitted X-markers in Mecklenburg County. Of this group we have 833 enrolled in classes.

"Since June 30, 1937, 435 have acquired the ability to write their names; prior to this 455 others acquired this skill. From 1934 to 1937 this program has reached 890 of the 7,754 persons who are illiterates in this county. There are 6,864 yet to be reached in order to make Mecklenburg County a completely literate county."

"Authorities" Sought

Existence of what Miss Aiton calls "nonfunctioning literates to the number of 23,000,000 in the United States, taken in conjunction with the appraisal just quoted, have influenced the N. E. A. to press for passage of a bill for establishment of State adult education "authorities," Miss Aiton said. The type of literate to whom she referred is one who can read and write, but who cannot read a newspaper understandingly, or otherwise put his knowledge to use.

Two adult education bills are before Congress, one sponsored primarily by the N. E. A. and the other understood to be sponsored by Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, and introduced by Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Senator Lee's bill limits adult education to that for literacy and citizenship, and through public affairs forums. The bill favored by the National Education Association would appropriate, under a plan of State aid, $5,000,000 for the first year, $10,000,000 the second year, and $15,000,00 in succeeding years. The "authorities" would work out plans for apportioning the funds.

Va. Schools Held Violating State Distillery Law

Richmond, Va., May 30 (AP).—Most of Virginia's schools, State departments, industrial plants and chemical laboratories are violating the State liquor law and are subject to fines of $500 and 12-month jail sentences.

Section 51 of the ABC act says "If any person shall keep, store or have in possession any still, or distilling apparatus, without a permit from the control board, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

A board spokesman said yesterday "the vast majority" had not only failed to obtain such permits but had not applied for them.

County Head Advocates 12-Month School Term

Lexington, Va., May 30 (AP).—R. M. Irby, Rockbridge County school superintendent, asserting increasing high school enrollments posed a problem for the county, advocated a 12-month term and proposed three types of diplomas—classical, scientific and vocational—in a talk today at the dedication of Effinger High School.

To Correct Constipation Don't Get It!

Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew!

WPA Cut Seen In House Draft Of Relief Bill

Administrative Costs And 'White Collar' Projects Under Fire

First formal discussions of the actual content of the 1940 relief bill were undertaken yesterday—despite the holiday—in a closed session of a House appropriations sub-committee.

Working on a draft bill presented by the Budget Bureau, the committee reached no conclusions on the President's proposed total of $1,760,000,000 for relief expenditures in 1940.

However, it considered plans for economies such as limiting WPA administrative expenditures in various categories like travel and communications. One committee member described WPA Administrator Harrington's offer to cut administrative costs by nearly 30 per cent, to $50,000,000, as "still not enough economy."

It is understood the committee also considered the feasibility of demanding a fixed percentage contribution from local sponsors of WPA projects. At present, sponsorship contributions vary widely, the national average running about 17 per cent.

PWA Appropriation Probable

Observers of the relief investigation believe that the PWA—for which no provision has been made in the President's budget proposals—will receive an appropriation of $250,000,000 or more. Many of the committee members are known to oppose permitting the WPA to continue heavy construction work.

From the trend of the investigation, it also is believed that limitations will be placed on some WPA "while-collar" projects, notably theater, arts and writers.

As soon as the sub-committee completes the bill—probably by the end of next week—the temporarily suspended inquiry into WPA will be resumed with testimony regarding road and construction projects in Pennsylvania. After two weeks' presentation of evidence, a preliminary report on the investigation will be drawn up. It is thought possible the House will be asked to provide additional funds to continue the inquiry during the summer.

A survey by the American Association of Social Workers, covering relief conditions in 35 States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, is in the hands of the Appropriation Committee, the United Press reported last night.

Describing conditions of "schocking human refugees with no place to go," it recommends Federal grants-in-aid to States as the only means of achieving a uniform and adequate system of relief.

Average monthly relief grant per case last January was reported as $38.16 in New York, contrasted with $2.91 in Mississippi. A family of four in Atlanta, Ga., was found to be receiving $6.70 a month for food, while food grants in Taos, N. Mex., averaged $2.50 monthly.

General need for relief increased sharply at a time when WPA was cutting its rolls, said the report. According to the survey, 23,000,000 persons in 7,000,000 families were dependent on public aid in January.

82 Ordained Priests at Catholic U.

Largest Class This Year Outside Rome Enters Priesthood Before 2,000

In one of the most inspiring ceremonies in the history of Catholic University, 82 young men—the largest class this year outside of Rome—yesterday morning renounced things of the world for the priesthood.

While 2,000 persons looked on, and chanters raised their voices in the Litany of the Saints, the ordinants prostrated themselves upon the floor of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, an act symbolizing, according to Catholic ritual, their "unworthiness and need of divine assistance."

Arising a few minutes later, they filed to the altar, which bore towering candles, and where stood the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, adorned in his gold mitre, red robes and red gloves. "Thou would vouchsafe to bless and sanctify these elect," he softly intoned.

Blessings Bestowed

As they returned to their pews, and knelt, the candidates felt hands upon their heads, a bestowal of blessing from participating priests, who then walked to the altar, where they stood surrounding the prelate until all colleagues had joined in the imposition of hands.

Later they received the ceremony of the anointing of the hands with holy oil, symbolizing the dedication of the person to the service of God, and then again proceeded to the altar for the investiture rites, kneeling as the bishop placed their stoles upon them, sayin: "Receive the yoke of the Lord for His yoke is sweet and His burden light."

Gathering for the rites were hundreds of friends and relatives of the ordinants, scores of visiting priests, members of the various seminaries of Catholic University, Salvatorians with their pointed beards, Franciscans garbed in the picturesque brown robes and sandles, sisters of the Medical Mission, and many others.

Two Classmates

Included in the class were two candidates who had been classmates in grammar school, high school and throughout their theological training at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore and the Sulpician Seminary at Catholic University.

They are the Rev. George L. Hopkins, S. S., and the Rev. J. Edward Malloy, S. S., the latter son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Malloy, of this city.

Bishop McNamara was assisted by the Rev. William Lallou, of Catholic University; the Rev. Walter McCarthy, S. S., and the Rev. Edward Connelly, S. S., chaplains; the Rev. Walter Schmitz, master of ceremonies, and the Sulpician Seminarians, who served as minor officers. The Sulpician Choir sang.

Weather Bureau Obtains Famous Meteorologist

Professor Carl G. A. Rossby, native of Sweden and internationally known meteorologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will become assistant chief for research and education, a new position, in the United States Weather Bureau, it is announced by F. W. Reichelderfer, the bureau chief.

A three-year leave of absence from the institute has been obtained by Prof. Rossby. He is expected to assume his new duties in June. Educated in the Scandinavian countries and in Germany, Prof. Rossby is famous for application of advanced meteorological methods to weather forecasting. In 1928, he organized the model aero-weather service for Southern and Central California.

Colored School Cadet Contest Set Tomorrow

Competition Will Take Place in Griffith Stadium

The forty-seventh annual military drill contest among cadets of colored schools in the District will be held in Griffith Stadium tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. If weather prevents the competition on Thursday, it will be held the following day, according to Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools.

The drills will be built about solution of a war game to be propounded to the commanding officers of the cadet corps of Dunbar, Armstrong and Cardozo high schools. Faculty members who have coached the cadet captains, are Capt. Eugene Davidson, of Dunbar; Lieut. Raymond E. Contee, and Maj. George Ferguson, of Armstrong.

Winner of the medal presented at the first such contest held in the auditorium of the Metropolitan Baptist Church in 1893, was Benjamin Washington, now an instructor in Armstrong High School, and a member of the military drill committee.

Prof. Clyde McDuffie, head of the department of languages in the high schools of Divisions 10-13, and a hundred former cadets will present regimental colors to the massed cadets. Sixty pupils of Armstrong High School, under Ernest Amost, will form the only band in the parade. They will give a musical program from 12:30 to 1:30.

Virginia Brick Plant Guarded By Police in Strike

Twenty Virginia State and Arlington County policemen were stationed at the West Bros. Brick Co. plant to forestall disorders there after 207 laborers walked out on strike yesterday.

According to labor representatives the strike was called because of operators' failure to answer demands for an hourly wage system and a closed shop. Negotiations at which Labor Department conciliators participated broke off Saturday.

D. C. Estate Creditors Win Priority

The Court of Appeals Monday affirmed a decision of District Court giving Washington creditors first claim on the estate of Francis H. Duehay, World War superintendent of prisons, and later a receiver for the Shoreham Hotel, who died in May, 1934.

Duehay, a resident of Virginia, left $13,333.34, paid in compensation for his work as Shoreham receiver as the only material asset of his estate. Claims of Washington creditors totaled more than $300,000, $129,000 of it District Court judgments, while Virginia creditors claimed $14,000.

Duehay's widow, Mrs. Edith G. Duehay, as administrator, claimed that the District law giving judgment creditors priority should not apply since Duehay lived in Virginia.

Sumners Spends 64th Birthday in Hospital; Out Soon

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday marked his sixty-fourth birthday, in George Washington University Hospital.

Along with an extra flood of greetings from friends, and flowers, Representative Sumners received the comforting news that his temperature had gone down to normal.

A similar report was issued for Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, following a minor operation to his nose at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

Fire Follows Escape at D. C. Receiving Home

Holiday routine at the District Receiving Home, 816 Potomac avenue southeast, was disturbed on two occasions yesterday—an escape by two boys and a fire.

The youths escaped through the kitchen in the lunch hour.

An hour later one of the boys was brought back to the home by his mother. He was placed in the third-floor isolation room. Near evening, smoke was observed pouring out of the window of the room and officials found the runaway overcome with smoke.

Eastern U. S. Syrians to Convene Here

Plans Discussed For 2-Day Affair In September

Plans for the eighth annual convention of the Syrian and Lebanese-American Federation of the Eastern States were discussed at a meeting of the Syrian-Washingtonian Club in the Willard Hotel last night.

Joseph S. Sado, attorney in the office of the solicitor, Department of Agriculture, presided. He is president of the Washington chapter, and general chairman for the convention that will be held on September 16 and 17, with business sessions and banquet at the Willard.

A guest last night was A. M. Malouf, of Los Angeles, who is visiting the federations of American-Syrian citizens in the East, South, Midwest and Far West, to establish a national federation. Objects of the federation were said to be to assist in the training for citizenship of residents from Syria and the region about Mount Lebanon in Palestine.

"Our problems are here, as citizens," said Chairman Sado. "In its constitution our federation states that it will not engage in any controversy between the states in the home land."

Overton Plan Fate Governs New Schools

Building Program Depends on Whether Lump Sum for D. C. Will Be Increased

Replacement of a half dozen obsolete school buildings and numerous minor increases in the 1940 District supply bill yesterday hinged on whether or not Chairman Overton, of the Senate sub-committee in charge of the bill, is able to convince Congress that the Federal lump-sum payment should be nearer $8,000,000 than $5,000,000.

Deliberations on the question will start today as the sub-committee meets to mark up the bill.

Opposition Mounting

While some support of Overton's demand for a larger Federal payment is expected from the subcommittee, the proposal is due for mounting opposition in the Senate Appropriations Committee, the Senate, and finally in the House, if it gets that far.

If the committee or Congress turns down the Overton plan and holds the lump-sum payment to $5,000,000, indications are that the supply bill will be held pretty close to the $47,000,000 voted by the House.

Chairman Overton, just as much as Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, doesn't want local taxes hiked. Moreover, as the 1940 District revenue bill is still lying dormant in the House District Committee, Overton is afraid there may be no revenue measure.

Donovan to Testify

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan today will present to the sub-committee a brief history of the fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments. It will show that Congress has whittled its contribution down from a 50-50 share to approximately 11 per cent, while the city's operating costs have grown.

One of the Senators that Overton will find opposing his proposal to increase the lump sum will be Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee. So opposed to the Overton formula and all proposals to raise the Federal contribution has Senator King been that he has tied up the Overton formula, so far as legislation is concerned, in the District Committee for the past two months.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

With June, the Haylofts Will Carry the Torch

Capital's "Barn Theater" Season Soon to Open; The Vagaries of Weather and 'Show Business'; News Notes and Gossip of the Playhouse

NOW THAT JUNE is practically here, Washington's summer season of "barn theater" cannot be far behind.

As a matter of fact, and contrary to all expectation, the first in the field—and "in the field" is correct—will be the Cross Roads Theater, down Bailey's Cross Roads way, over in Virginia. The Cross Roads will open on next Monday, June 5, with a revival of Ann Nichols' record-run play of "Abie's Irish Rose."

BELL

All seats will be reserved at the Cross Roads this season. An innovation is being inaugurated by the management in the organization of a "First Nighters' Club," dedicated to those who insist on being present always when the first curtain goes up. The "First Nighters" may purchase membership tickets at the Cross Roads' downtown ticket office for $3.30, entitling them to first night attendance at all six plays to be produced by the Virginians during the summer.

A week in the wake of the Cross Roads will come the Roadside, pioneer in this sort of thing in the Washington territory. The Roadside will open its season on Monday, June 12, with another of those antique melodramas in which it specializes, "The Pioneer's Daughter."

This year's policy at the Roadside will be about the same as in past seasons. Each play will run two weeks and seven are scheduled for production. The Monday night bus service to and from the theater, on the Rockville pike a little beyond Bethesda, Md., will be resumed and, presumably, that old cowbell will be rung lustily between the acts to signify the end of intermissions and the dousing of cigaret stubs.

A new project makes itself known through the announcement that all local actors interested are invited to attend open tryouts for "The Tempest," first of a summer series of great plays, to be presented for Washington audiences by the Glen Echo Players. Tryouts will be held at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow and Friday in the playhouse at Glen Echo. Actors will receive a small nightly salary during the run of the play, which will include a short tour of neighboring towns and several performances at the Glen Echo Playhouse.

Thus soon will end the lull between the regular and hayloft seasons of the "legitimate" drama. All of these centers of cowshed drama are remote from the center of Washington. Any one of them, however, is fun, once you get there.

In the meantime, an enveloping and mysterious silence continues as to the probable plans of Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater, midway between here nad Baltimore. The Olney was to have opened on May 15, with Glenda Farrell, as guest star, in "Stage Door." I was on the "Union Pacific Special," chatting with Miss Farrell, when Panjandrum Cochran boarded the train to consummate the deal. Miss Farrell's commitments to "Union Pacific" were such that May 15 was out of the question as an inaugural date. So it was postponed, in my hearing, until May 22. Nothing happened on May 22, and that is the last that has ever been heard of the Olney. It is the most commodious of Washington's summer theaters—if it would just get going.

Yesterday's perfect holiday weather did the theater box-offices no appreciable good whatever. Such is always the case in these circumstances, until nightfall. Then the customers begin to pile into the refrigerated cathedrals of the celluloids and receipts begin to scramble back toward normal. But they never quite reach it. That daytime loss is hard to pick up in three hours.

Memorial Day, however, was the banner one so far—it has only been open since last Saturday—for the Crystal Pool, out at Col. Leonard B. Schloss' Glen Echo Park. They were splashing in droves out there all day, spending the off-time toasting on the sand beach.

And the river excursions steamers did land-office business, too—if you can do "land-office" business on the water. The City of Washington, of the Wilson Line, and the S. S. Potomac, of the Potomac Line, were packed to the rails on their moonlight excursions.

Owing to renewed public interest in Paderewski, the Little Theater management is holding over "Moonlight Sonata" as a companion feature with "We're Going to Be Rich," starring Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen, which opens this morning. "Moonlight Sonata" was announced to have closed last night, but didn't. So now you know.

There were so many unique touches of directorial skill in "Only Angels Have Wings," and my curiosity concerning them was so great, that arrangements have been made for this column to hold a long-distance conversation with Howard Hawks, the director, tonight. There are many things I am anxious to find out concerning how such films are made. If the wires are clear and I get anywhere with Mr. Hawks, the results of our confab will be emblazoned here at a later date.

I doubt if Springfield, Ill., ever will be the same again. Yesterday was the day of that fabulous Twentieth Century-Fox premiere of "Young Mr. Lincoln," starring Henry Fonda, with practically all functions of state and city devoted to the aggrandisement of the event. We already have set forth in this space what the day's program was—official luncheons, dinners, sightseeing tours, broadcasts and whatnot in addition to the actual showing of the picture. More than 10¢ Eastern newspaper, magazine and syndicate representatives attended on that special train that pulled out of New York on Monday. It will be back in New York tomorrow. It will be a happy, but a weary, crowd of scriveners who will detrain. Springfield, Ill., is quite a distance away and you don't sleep much on Pullmans the first couple of nights. Or do you?

Insomniac-Afterthought Note

MURIEL BARR

has so many admirers that she has to carry her phone to the beach with her—and plug it in where? Anyway, it's a nice picture and Miss Barr is said to do nice work in "Man About Town," starring Jack Benny, with Dorothy Lamour and Edward Arnold. She was selected for the films by Artist George Petty, delineator of feminine loveliness in the class magazine field

" . . . and I think it's awful of Tiffany's—to move uptown to Fifty-seventh Street . . . What, dear? . . . You never knew I was interested in Tiffany's location? Of course I am, I used to tell my friends that I didn't shop there because it's too far downtown . . . Well, now I need another excuse."

11 P. M.: The Grand Duchess Marie, niece of the late Czar, visited the Soviet Pavilion this week," a producer states at the Cotton Club. "She went with Terence Philip. Marie works for the French Line, and wore their red, Normandie button. She heard the woman next to her say: 'How insolent of these Reds—wearing their insignia so brazenly' " . . . "Frank Waltman, publicity director for the G. O. P., thought up that 'National Debt Week' idea," a Republican official informs at the Penthouse Club. "Bruce Barton helped—although Senator McNary objected to it" . . . "Because of political objections in Cuba," an artist confides at the Tavern, "Massaguer's cartoons will be removed from the Cuban Pavilion."

12 P. M.: "Supreme Court Justice Douglas," a Washington executive informs at the Gamecock, "whose appointment was objected to because he's not a Westerner—although born in the State of Minnesota—will return to the State of Washington, where he grew up, for the first time in years. He'll vacation there" . . . "I just left H. H. Rogers, jr., in Florida," Connie Immerman reports at Leon and Eddie's. "He bought part of an island off Miami Beach, and has sent to New York for his trailer—to live in it until his house is finished" . . . "Look at Harry Richman," a film producer elates at the International Casino. "This week we'll sign him to do a picture for us" . . . Tom Girdler, head of Republic Steel—whose statement, that the Federal taxes practically constituted robbery, was front-paged—acts as a foil for Giovanni, the sleight-of-hand expert, who removes Girdler's watch, wallet and belt.

"I took my wife, Dorothy, to see 'Philadelphia Story,' and lost a 50 cents bet to her," Sinclair Lewis confesses at Sardi's. "We bet on which man would win Katharine Hepburn. Dorothy won" . . .

2 A. M.: "Alfred Lunt is very sick now," a director informs at The Famous Door. Lynn Fontanne is with him, at Genesee Depot." . . . "Edgar Bergen will bring Charlie McCarthy to the World's Fair," an agent reports at the Gay 90's. "He's going to inspect the giant replica of Charlie, which is one of the Fair's exhibits" . . . "The temperature in India during May is 120 in the shade," a correspondent assures at Fefe's Monte Carlo. "Sure I know Gandhi. What does he do in May? He does what the others do—sits and sweats" . . .

3 A. M.: "Yes, I'm remaining in New York now, to take care of my father's invention," Leila Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, declares at the Stork Club. "It's called the 'Owens Smokeless Heater,' used for orchards. We have two factories, one here and the other in California. We'll make a million dollars."

4 A. M.: "Senator Pat Harrison is telling his friends," an editor states at the 18 Club, "that his talk with Roosevelt last week was the pleasantest they've had since 1933" . . . "So Scribner's magazine folded? I hope I'm not responsible," Kurt Weill, the composer, laments at the Village Vanguard. "Because I wrote them two weeks ago and said: 'Please discontinue publication' " . . .

5 A. M.: "You can bet on this," a Democratic official assures at Reuben's, "Garner already has made a deal with Ed Dunlap, Senator George's campaign manager, to try and get the Georgia delegation away from the pro-Roosevelt man, Gov. Rivers" . . . "Before the Dies Committee springs all it has," a detective reports at Lindy's, "Leon Turrou, the former G man who wrote 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy,' will testify before it"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 30.—Joel McCrea was just kidding when he said he didn't want any more long-term contracts after he and Sam Goldwyn canceled their deal by mutual consent. Monday, Joel signed a two-year ticket with Paramount, calling for two pictures per year, and the first is to be "Safari," with Madeleine Carroll. This new contract, signed so soon after the Goldwyn cancellation, lends credence to the stories that Joel and Goldwyn tiffed when he was refused permission to go with the "Union Pacific" troupe to Omaha for the premiere.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Para should seem like home to Joel, anyway. He made his two biggest recent pictures there. "Wells Fargo" and "Union Pacific." In "Safari," with the beauteous Madeleine, he will have another of his strong, silent he-man roles, playing the guide who escorts a caravan across the desert and falls hard for the English girl.

Carole Lombard still owes David Selznick a picture and today the studio closed a deal for "Flashing Stream" to star Mrs. C. Gable. In case it has slipped your mind, this is the Charles Morgan play that took an awful beating from the critics in New York—but they say its movie possibilities far exceed the limitation of the stage. Carole will portray the role of the woman mathematical genius who is sent down to a mythical island in the Atlantic to aid a group of men in working out an aerial torpedo. It's heavy drammer—far afield of her screwball comedy parts. However, you needn't hold your breath waiting to see Carole as the lady genius, since she has "Vigil in the Night" to make for RKO first.

Hear that Sidney Kingsley and Warners are huddling over one of his plays and if the deal goes through, the New York playwright wants no other heroine but Madge Evans to star in it. This romance seems to be getting hotter and hotter and certainly this interest in Madge's career sounds like something more than a passing friendship. Swell little actress that she is, Madge still hasn't been getting very good movie breaks since her MGM contract lapsed. But maybe this will be a luckier and happier year for her, for the gossips insist she and Kingsley will be married soon, and it never hurts any actress' career to have a writer in the family.

Betty Grable and Jackie Coogan are bracing themselves against another batch of divorce rumors when she goes her way and he goes his on personal appearance tours with "Million Dollar Legs." For some reason, Para is breaking up the kid and his wife to send Jackie way down South with the picture, while Betty heads to Chicago and points East. This will be their first separation since they went back together after their marital fracas—and as far as the naked eye can see, the Coogan, jrs., have been hitting it off very well. Betty has told friends they get along a lot better now than before they had any trouble

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Martha Raye dueting with Artie Shaw at the Cafe Lamaze doesn't mean that she and Hubby Dave Rose are having trouble. He was tied up whipping out a new song. Margaret Lockwood finally unveiled her mysterious English husband for Hollywood to look at. They motored to Sequoia today, after doing the night clubs the previous evening. Elaine Barrie was in a party with Joseph Schenck, Peggy Fears, A. C. Blumenthal, Sid Grauman, Walter Pidgeon and Joan Dale making the rounds of the night spots. Poor Mozelle Britton had to celebrate her sixth wedding anniversary on crutches, with Alan Dinehart playing new records for the party touch.

Bette Davis knocked them cold on the set when she giggled and said: "Imagine me having the nerve to place Queen Elizabeth!" Jackie Cooper and Freddy Bartholomew are showing Sheila O'Sullivan, Maureen's kid sister, the sights of the town; Jean Feldman leaves Friday for a month's vacation in New York; Olympe Bradna swears she's gained 1 inch in height since she's been in Hollywood; the Gary Coopers will be in New York for the opening of "Beau Geste" and then go to Bermuda for the summer; Virginia Field is bringing her aunt, Auriol Lee, the stage director, back with her from New York; Jean Negulesco, who used to devote himself exclusively to Binnie Barnes, was at Marcel's with Patricia Morison; Marjorie Weaver, with Fred Shaw, giving out with "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," at the Grace Hayes lodge.

Now that L. O. P. is back in town—this is my last stint on the column. Tomorrow, your favorite Hollywood reporter will be telling you the news and goings-on—while they take me out of the straightjacket I've worn for the last two weeks. But thanks for your kind attention!

Actress' Ring Is Guide to Stardom

A ring with a history came to light on the stage for "The Women." It has been handed down through generations of stage stars. The ring is worn by an actress before she becomes a star, and is then passed on to another young actress on the eve of her first important Broadway role. It was presented to Muriel Hutchison by Blanche Yurka the night that she opened in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," with Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

Among other owners of the ring have been Ethel Barrymore, Katharine Cornell and Helen Hayes.

Reads Home Paper

Virginia Bruce still reads the newspapers of Fargo, N. Dak., the town in which she was born, to keep up with the doings of all the old friends she had "back home."

Hedy Asks Crew to Use Her First Name

Hedy Lamarr's first ultimatum, when she reported for her first scenes with Robert Taylor in "Lady of the Tropics," was that she does not want to be addressed as Miss Lamarr by her fellow-workers.

"Please call me Hedy," she advised Jack Conway, the director. "You pronounce it Hay-dee."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 30.—This being Decoration Day, all the stars who aren't relaxing on their boats, or in the country, will be on hand to watch the ponies and the fashions at the Hollywood Park. At home in Altoona we watched the parade, then decorated graves. In New York I usually got misty-eyed counting the diminishing Civil War Veterans passing Grant's Tomb.

HOPPER

But in Hollywood we're on parade. But it has nothing to do with war. Which reminds me, Elsie Janis just phoned to say hello! She did her imitations in the Frank Faye show in New York. But her biggest thrill was telling her friends she was 50 at her birthday party, and watching their startled faces at her frankness.

Whatever it is, she's found the secret. She no longer wants to be in the parade, or watch it. But has found peace sitting in her garden.

Eddie Horton has just put his beautiful house in the valley up for rent. He's going back to New York to do a play, and it would serve Hollywood right if he stayed five years. There's one of the best comedians pictures and radio ever had. And if they let him escape Hollywood's not as smart as I give it credit for being.

Sonja Henie's going to town for Stewart Redburn, her skating partner in "Second Fiddle." With our urgent need for new leading men, I think he has an awfully good chance. I lunched with him the other day when he told me he was about to start on a motor trip.

"Aren't you going to wait for the preview" I asked.

"No," said he, "if they like me in 'Second Fiddle' and my test, I can always be reached in Canada. In the meantime I won't be settin'—I'll be learning about our countries."

George Raft's Cold Water home has always been occupied by Virginia Peine. But now, for the first time, George is living there himself. And she's touring, which looks as though day is done for those two.

Howard Hughes, whose name has been linked with Brenda Frazier in New York, Florida and Bermuda, is back in Hollywood, and where is Brenda Frazier? He's here to make a picture deal for Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," and won't sell it without her.

The day Johnny "Scat" Davis' daughter was born, an insurance agent called and said, "How about making plans for her college education?"

Did you know that Von Sternberg's friends call him "The Jewish Fu Manchu?"

The Chinese are more eager for education than a picture career. They could scarcely pry the Chinese kids in "Disputed Passage" out of the schoolroom and onto the set.

No wonder Clarence Brown likes the Twentieth-Century lot. They've given him a whole bungalow over there.

The Shirley Temple rabbits multiply so rapidly that the gardeners on the lot practically live off them. Now they're thinking of going on a vegetable diet.

Floyd Roberts Killed as Wilbur Shaw Wins 500-Mile Race

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

(News item: "Tony Galento picks Lou Nova to defeat Max Baer Thursday night.")

Which is probably no consolation whatsoever to young Mr. Nova. If asked bluntly, Nova would doubtless prefer to be included out of Galento's fistic reckonings, inasmuch as Galento reckons, too, that on a night later this summer, Tony Galento will knock out one Joe Louis.

POVICH

The Nova-Baer bout, at best, is a useless sort of affair as far as its bearing on any title is concerned. The one thing that both Baer and Nova should be seeking to avoid when they find themselves within the ring tomorrow evening is victory. Because that would automatically pit them against Joe Louis, an assignment equivalent to entering an abattoir disguised as a steer.

Baer, if he beats Nova, would be no better than a 20-to-1 shot in any bout with Louis inasmuch as he is four years older than the Baer who got himself knocked out by Louis in 1935. And Nova, if he beats Baer, will have achieved small credit. Because he will have licked a guy who can't fight very well even when he chooses to fight.

By the end of the summer, after Louis had licked Tony Galento and Nova, or Baer, as the case may be, the heavyweight division is apt to be at its lowest ebb in all history. There will be nobody on the fistic scene with the ghost of a chance of licking Louis, and Louis himself may no longer be gracing the heavyweight ranks.

Even Louis' managers, though they dislike to admit it, are confessing that the Brown Bomber is at the point of retirement. Despite the ease of his victories, Louis is losing his taste for fighting and is hankering to retire on the half-million dollars he has earned in the ring. That half-million is the residue, actually, of $2,000,000 his fists earned for him, but with training expense, managerial cuts and heavy income taxes, Louis saves only 25 cents on every dollar he has earned during the past four years.

Silva Has a Press Agent

Washington will get a glimpse of a world champion on Monday night when Joey Archibald crawls through the ropes at Griffith Stadium for a nontitle bout with Mexican Joey Silva. But after reading the press-agent's blurb, we do not particularly care to see Archibald. The guy we want to put the glimmers on is this fellow Silva.

To hear his press-agent tell it, Silva is extremely fortunate to be alive at this date. "Born the wealthy son of a silver mine operator some 50-odd miles from Mexico City, Joey had the experience of being in the hands of the notorious bandit chieftain, Pancho Villa, who kidnaped the youngster along with his 44-year-old father.

"The Villa gang demanded a vast sum of money from Silva's dad after descending on the home of the mine-owner and snatching father and son. The ransom money was turned over to the Villa band, but the outlaws decided to kill Joey's pappy. They turned the lad loose, however.

"When his relatives found Joe at the designated 'spot,' they found a note attached to his clothing, telling where the father could be found. Rushing to a lonely mountain section, they found the body of Joey's dad dangling from a tree."

Los Angeles More Peaceful

After the kidnaping incident, continuous banditry caused Mrs. Silva to move her little family to Los Angeles, where Joey blossomed as a smart amateur boxer. Jack Laken, his present manager, discovered him in a gym there and signed him to a professional contract.

Mexican Joey qualified for the Archibald bout by beating the clever Al Reid, of New York last month. That victory prompted Reid's manager, Charley Rose, to "wager any part of $1,000 that Silva will beat Archibald at Griffith Stadium on Monday," according to Silva's advance press notices. At that, Joey Archibald should hold little terror for a guy who got away from Pancho Villa.

Nats Split Double Bill With Macks

First Game Lost, 3-1, Despite Alexandra's 4-Hit Pitching; 2d Won by Chase, 8-4

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats spent Decoration Day by taking a trip into seventh place during the afternoon and returning to sixth place by nightfall by winning the second game of the holiday double-header with the Athletics, 8 to 4. Before 16,000 shirt-sleeved and unhappy fans, they lost the opener, 3 to 1.

The 16,000 were unhappy because in that first game the impotent Nats wasted a superb pitching display by the new pet of the Washington staff, Senor Alex Alexandra. For the big Venezuelan it was a cruel defeat, because he allowed the Athletics only four paltry hits while the Nats were putting eight hits off Philadelphia pitching to little use.

In fact, it was Alexandra who saved the Nats the ignominy of a shut-out coincident with their sixth straight defeat. The one run the Nats did score in that first game was the personal contribution of the Venezuelan who startled the Nats, the A's, the 16,000 and himself by swatting a seventh-inning home run into the distant leftfield bleacher seats.

Nats Regain Sixth

At the end of that first game, the A's had claimed the Nats' sixth place in the standings and bequeathed seventh to the Washington club, but the Nats regained their lost ground behind the pitching of Ken Chase in the second contest.

With Chase pitching six innings of runless ball after allowing two runs in the second inning, the Nats pounded two of Connie Mack's hurlers for 13 hits to take a commanding lead. Bobby Estalella, of the Nats' Latin Legion, provided the biggest blow of the second-game uprising—a first-inning homer with George Case on base.

All three of the runs surrendered by Alexandra in that first game were a bit tainted. The A's beat him when they bunched two of their hits behind a base on balls for two runs in the first inning. But with two out, Etten dropped a cheap single into short leftfield to drive over a run, and Nagel doubled against the leftfield wall to set the A's up in a 2-0 lead.

The A's picked up their third run in the third inning, thanks to Johnny Welaj. After Gantenbein had singled and had been sacrificed to second, Welaj took Ambler's fly to leftfield and for no reason at all heaved it wild over the head of First Baseman Sammy West.

Alex Hurls One-Hit Ball

Alex tried valiantly to keep the Nats in the ball game after that. He pitched one-hit ball after the third inning, and he didn't give up a hit through the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth, but the only run the Nats were able to stir up was the run that Alex supplied himself with his homer into the leftfield seats.

Nelson Potter, who started for the A's, was helped out by three double plays during the eight and two-thirds innings Connie Mack permitted him to pitch. A heart-breaking double play cut down the Nats in the fourth after Buddy Myer led off with a safe drag bunt. Sammy West smashed a hot line drive toward rightfield and First Baseman Etten speared it to his great surprise, and stepped on first to retire Myer for a double play.

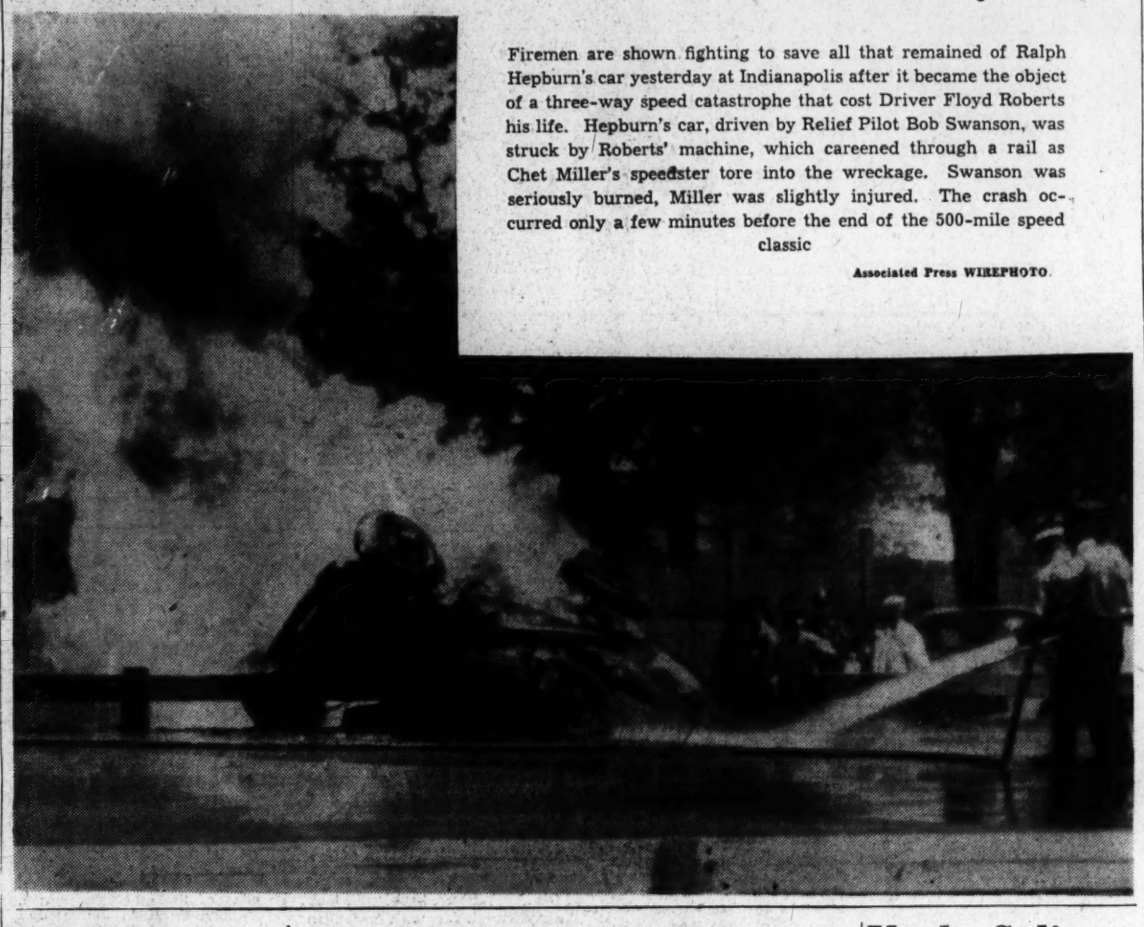
Wrecked Racer Burns After One Is Killed in Three-Way Crash



Firemen are shown fighting to save all that remained of Ralph Hepburn's car yesterday at Indianapolis after it became the object of a three-way speed catastrophe that cost Driver Floyd Roberts his life. Hepburn's car, driven by Relief Pilot Bob Swanson, was struck by Roberts' machine, which careened through a rail as Chet Miller's speedster tore into the wreckage. Swanson was seriously burned, Miller was slightly injured. The crash occurred only a few minutes before the end of the 500-mile speed classic

Miller and Swanson Injured Along With Two Women Fans at Indianapolis Event

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30.—Leaving death, wreckage and blasted hopes behind in his perilous ride, Wilbur Shaw, veteran Indianapolis driver, won the 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis motor speedway today in a dramatic finish.

Floyd Roberts, 39-year-old driver from Van Nuys, Calif., lost his life as Shaw, winner of the 1937 race, rode to triumph.

A few minutes before the finish, Roberts, critically injured in a smash-up of three cars, died of brain concussion in a hospital. Two other drivers, Chet Miller, of Detroit, and Bob Swanson, of Los Angeles, were injured, but not seriously. Two women spectators also were hurt.

Shaw, thrilling a crowd of 145,000, won through the misfortune of Flying Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., only three-time winner of the classic. Within the last 50 miles of victory, Meyer went into two dangerous spins. He lost the lead because of the first one when he blew a front tire. He was desperately attempting to regain it when he spun around the second time. In disgust, he pushed the car off the track and quit with only 7 more miles to go.

The victorious Shaw covered the 500 miles, 200 times around the 2½-mile brick and asphalt track, in 4:20:47.41, to average 115.035 miles an hour. This was below the record-breaking average of 117.2 miles an hour made by Roberts in triumphing a year ago, because the race was slowed down for 31½ minutes with the drivers going at a comparatively snail's pace while the wreckage of three cars was cleared from the track.

Shaw finished 1 minute and 58 precious seconds ahead of Jimmy Snyder, one-time Chicago milkman, who covered the distance in 4:22:35.60 to average 114.24 miles an hour. Cliff Bergere of Hollywood, Calif., was third and Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, fourth.

Babe Stapp, of Los Angeles, was fifth; George Barringer, of Houston, Tex., sixth, and Joel Thorne, of New Rochelle, N. Y., heir to railroad millions, driving one of four cars entered by him, was seventh. Mauri Rose, Columbus, Ohio, veteran, driving a car entered by the victorious Shaw, was eighth, with Frank Wearne, of Pasadena, Calif., ninth, and Billy Devore, of St. John, Kans., tenth.

Twelve of the original starting field of 33 were running at the finish. Eighteen were stranded because of mechanical trouble and three were wrecked.

By International News Service.

Cincinnati, May 30.—The National League-leading Reds today received a pair of jolts from the Chicago Cubs, failing, 6 to 0, in the morning battle of a Memorial Day double-header and being blanked, 2 ot 0, in the afternoon, before an astonished 40,619 crowd.

Larry French and Vance Page did the pitching for the Cubs and the Cincinnati sluggers only managed to get three runners as far as third base, two in the morning and one in the afternoon.

The Reds, who had scored 198 runs in 36 games, cracked their longest previous scoreless stretch which was 11 innings April 25 and April 26.

Northwestern Soph Wins Golf Crown

Evanston, Ill. May 30 (AP).—Chase Fannon, unheralded Northwestern University sophomore, won the individual golf championship of the Western Conference today with a 72-hole medal score of 295.

The 19-year-old Centerville, Iowa, youth never relinquished the leader's position despite hot competition from his teammate, Sid Richardson, who was seeking his third consecutive Big Ben title. Richardson finished with 298.

Cunningham Posts 4:15.6 for Record

Kansas Flyer Wins First Cy McDonald Memorial Trophy Race, Sets Byrd Stadium Mark; Five Other Standards Fall in Meet

By Jack Munhall.

Ten pounds underweight, his face drawn and haggard, and handicapped by the complete absence of competition on the final quarter, Glenn Cunningham, the peerless Kansas Flyer, nevertheless captured the first annual Cy McDonald memorial mile race in the Byrd Stadium record-breaking time of 4:15.6 yesterday to feature the A. A. U. track championships at College Park.

After trailing Maryland's Mason Chronister for the best part of three laps, Cunningham forced his tenacious rival to drop out at the start of the fourth and went on to defeat John Corbett, of Catholic University, by about 100 yards. His performance clipped almost seven full seconds off the previous Byrd Stadium record of 4:22.4, established by Coleman Headley.

Chronister's decision to quit the race just as he and Glenn had crossed the starting line for the fourth lap simultaneously was disappointing to his rooters and also quite surprising for he had not been running any faster than usual. The time for the first half mile was 2:07, whereas Chronister ripped off the first half of the recent Southern Conference championship mile in 2:06 to finish second to Jim Davis.

Runs Smart Race

Corbett, pacing himself well, not making the foolish mistake of trying to run Cunningham into the ground, was the official winner of the race and its appending A. A. U. title. Second to Corbett was another Catholic University entry, A. Martini, who made a great rally to beat out Bob Little, of American University.

Maryland University, sparked by Halbert Evans, who set records in winning both the high and low hurdles, walked away with the A. A. U. team title, scoring 63 points to 34 for Catholic University, runner-up. The Washington Track and Field Club, with George Bogan, a Georgetown University medical school student, winning the 100 and 200 and tying his own record for the latter, was a third with 17.

Propelled onward by another of Wally Legg's amazing performances, Washington-Lee continued its sweep of every important scholastic title in sight this season by taking the Metropolitan scholastic team championship. With Legg, who was making his final appearance in a Generals' suit, winning both hurdle events and the broad jump for individual high-scoring honors, the Ballston boys amassed 38 points. Central was second with 26, and Eastern was third with 17.

Washington-Lee also holds the University of Maryland open title and the "C" Club crown.

Five meet and one stadium records were shattered, and one meet mark was equaled by the field, one of the strongest ever assembled from Washington and its environs.

Cravat Wins Suburban 'Cap By 2 Lengths

By the United Press.

New York, May 30.—Spurred off to one of the quickest breaks of his notoriously slow-starting career, Townsend B. Martin's bay colt Cravat ran to a comparatively easy victory in the fifty-second renewal of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park today without even calling on the stretch-running power for which he is famed.

Cravat's handlers reached clear out to California to import a jockey for just such an occasion as this, and Jackie Westrope, who arrived by air only a few hours before the $20,000-added race, did his job and did it well. He guided Cravat into the lead rounding the home stretch turn, kept him clear of six hot-footed rivals in the closing furlongs of the mile and a quarter route, and flashed him across the wire with a two-length margin.

Time over the fast track under a broiling sun was 2:02 4-5. Cravat won $17,750 net first money out of the $25,000 gross purse and paid off in the books at 4-1, 8-5 and 7-10.

Yanks Split With Bosox, 8-4 and 17-7

Yanks Blast 17 Hits In Second; Williams Smacks Two Homers

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 30.—After performing in an inspired fashion behind Monte Weaver, a surprise starter, for an 8-4 victory in the first game, the Red Sox bogged down and surrendered the nightcap to the Yankees, 17-9, today before 35,000 at Fenway Park.

Thousands of others were turned away at the gates, due to Owner Tom Yawkey's anticrowding order.

In the opener of the holiday bill with the champions, the Red Sox blasted Charlie (Red) Ruffing for eight hits and seven runs before he quit in the fourth, defeated for the first time this season. Ted Williams, Jimmy Foxx and Manager Joe Cronin slammed out homers during the first game, and the rookie outfielder collected his eighth four-base drive off Monte Pearson in the second struggle.

The Yanks pounded five Boston pitchers for 17 hits, only 2 more than the Sockers made off Pearson. Oral Hildebrand and Johnny Murphy as the New Yorkers squared accounts. After being held hitless in the opener, Frank Crosetti paced the champions with a perfect four-and-four performance at the plate in the second.

Jack Wilson opened for the Red Sox in the second contest and was yanked in the fourth after the Yanks built up a 7-2 lead. The Sockers rallied behind Lefty Fritz Ostermueller and pulled up to 7-8 in the fifth. Then the Yanks got the range and blasted him for four more runs before he retired in the seventh.

Joe DiMaggio was pressed into service against Ostermueller in the seventh to bat for Hildebrand. He

Floyd Roberts Had Planned To Quit Track

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 30.—The "last race" proved to be the last race for Floyd Roberts.

ROBERTS

Roberts put the winnings of his 1938 triumph at Indianapolis into a farm at Van Nuys, near here, but wanted "one more shot at the big race."

He was married and the father of two children, Betty Louise, 11, and Billy, 9. When not racing, he was a master mechanic at an aviation plant.

Lou Moore, former driver and owner of Roberts' mount in today's race, said before leaving for Indianapolis:

"Floyd has all the confidence in the world and thinks he will win that race." Moore added, "I think the race this year will be a dizzy one."

Roberts won $38,000 for his victory last year. After that race, Mrs. Roberts told interviewers:

"Floyd has always wanted to retire to a farm and I have always agreeed with him. He's always wanted to do it as soon as he had enough money.

"I am sort of hoping he will do it now, since he's reached his goal, but of course that's up to him."

Pagan, in Kan Doo, Wins Gunston Race

By Bob Knight.

Running virtually with the wind over an 11-mile course in record time, Dr. Albert E. Pagan's 20-foot Kan Doo rolled to an easy victory over a field of 22 boats yesterday in the fifth annual Gunston Cove-Alexandria sailing classic.

Dr. Pagan's fast craft, known in local waters for her light-weather performances, led the Potomac River Sailing Association fleet across the finish by more than 12 minutes, winning The Washington Post Trophy. Kan Doo, a Mower designed craft built by Charlie Dean in Alexandria, led the fleet all the way after plunging to a fast start with nearly a dozen other contestants.

By the time the fleet had reached Mount Vernon Kan Doo was ahead by nearly a half-mile, followed by Judge Prentis E. Edrington's Lady Avon. The sea-going jurist's craft attempted to meet the pace set down by Kan Doo, but fell further behind as the race progressed. By the time the leader had reached Hunting Creek she had left Lady Avon nearly a mile astern.

Battle for Second

Judge Edrington meanwhile was battling out second position with H. C. Bush's Cricket II, winner of the 30-foot restricted class series held Sunday at the Cove. Eight Ball, owned by Charles Murphy, was coming up fast, pushed by a tailing wind.

As the field reached Hunting Creek, the wind died. More than a half-dozen craft lay with their sails flapping, relying only on the current. A brisk breeze stirred a mile Comets abreast. Their good fortune, astern and drove a covey of however, was short-lived. They had been hugging the shore up the northward side of the river and three of them ran ashore in shoal waters.

Virginia Pilot Takes Auerbach Memorial Boating

Atlantic City, N. J., May 30—(AP)—William E. Gatewood, of Norfolk, Va., holder of the National 225-cubic-inch hydroplane championship, captured the Auerbach Memorial Trophy today by racing 22.6 miles around Absecon Island in 36 minutes, 52 seconds.

Quick work on the part of Gatewood's mechanic, Charles Vellines, saved the race. Gatewood's 225-inch hydroplane Miss Manteo, was 2 miles ahead of the nearest competition, when, 50 feet from the finish line, the engine blew off its exhaust manifold.

Gatewood threw up his hands to indicate to the judges his motor was hopelessly "conked," but 22-year-old Vellines, riding as boat mechanic for the first time, grabbed the red hot manifold with his gloves and shoved it back in place, and the boat, sputtered in just three seconds ahead of the Isme, a class E inboard, driven by Jack Thomas of Seaside, N. J.

Terrors Triumph

The insect nine of Chevy Chase Terrors smashed out a 14-3 triumph over Southeast Merchants yesterday behind Bill Boyce's seven-hit pitching. Phil Funk had three hits in five times, including a double.

Of $100,000 prize money, $60,000 went to the first 10 of the original 33 starters. The other $40,000 was divided in consolation prizes.

Tony Gulotta, of Dearborn, Mich., was allowed to finish the full 500 miles. Louis Tomei, of Portland, Ores., also still running at the finish, was flagged after 465 miles.

Shorty Cantlon, Detroit, 37 miles, broken oil line; Deacon Litz, Dubois, Pa., 17 miles, stalled motor; Floyd Davis Springfield, Ill., 100 miles, stalled motor; George Bailey, Detroit, 110 miles, broken valve; Russell Snowberger, Detroit, 148 miles, defective cooling system; Al Miller, Detroit, 102 miles, stalled motor; Ira Hall, Terra Haute, Ind., 227 miles, motor trouble; Ralph Hepburn, 289 miles, wreck; Floyd Roberts, Van Nuys, Calif., 245 miles, wreck; Chet Miller, Detroit, 274 miles, wreck; Bob Swanson, Los Angeles (his starting car), 47 miles, defective motor; Emil Andres, Chicago, 50 miles, defective oil line; Frank Brisko, Chicago, 95 miles, motor trouble; Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif., 362 miles, blown piston; Herb Ardinger, Pittsburgh, 351 miles, motor trouble; Kelly Petillo, Los Angeles, 330 miles, defective clutch; Louis Meyer, Huntington Park, Calif., 493 miles, wreck; Mel Hansen, Los Angeles, 316 miles, crashed into wall; Tony Willman, Milwaukee, 470 miles, motor trouble; George Connor, Los Angeles, 488 miles, motor trouble; Harry MacQuinn, Milwaukee, 275 miles, defective clutch.

Meyer Leads Holiday Golf Tourney Play at Manor Club

Cox, Jamison, Two Amateurs Score 17 Birdies in Match At Indian Spring

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Topping a record field in the 36-hole jack pot tournament, winning the driving contest with three clouts totaling 820 yards and finishing second in the selective holes play, Dick Meyer, Manor's 18-year-old star, was the big winner of a holiday celebration at the Norbeck Club, one of many here yesterday in one of the biggest club tournament days in years.

Meyer, who had a 68 in his first round, added a 75 and deducted a 12 handicap from the 143 gross total for a 131 and the winning score. W. J. LaBille tied for second, 76, 80—156—24—132, and J. C. Putnam, 81, 73—154—22—132.

Putnam won the selective holes play with a 34 total, while Meyer and Dr. C. V. Stiefel had 35 and J. A. Pratt 38. Chester Leakin topped the high scores in the selective holes, with 52 to 51 for W. T. Ferrell and E. Nash, 49.

Meyer's three drives of 820 yards topped the two-way tie for second between John McBride and L. L. Nettledon, at 750 yards each.

Mrs. J. G. Taylor topped the field in the women's 9-hole flag event, finishing three feet from the tenth cup, with Mrs. C. A. Jannacker 25 feet away and Mrs. George Johnson, 30 feet. The women's putting contest went to Mrs. L. C. Pray, with 34, while Marion Brown had 36. Betty Quirk, Jean Brown, Nellie Mae Neff and Mrs. H. Cooper, 37.

KENWOOD

Club champion Johnny Bergelin was the major prize winner in Kenwood's varied tournament program, winning the flag tournament by finishing in the trap on the 19th hole, while W. J. Snow was two feet short of the 19th green.

Bergelin also won the driving contest, hitting one 285 yards while R. W. Harvey was five yards back. F. H. Haines stepped up to the pitching contest when it was about half over, sunk a shot from 40 yards and discouraged the remainder of the field from competing. Bergelin was also second in this, two feet from the cup.

Mrs. J. W. Harvey and LaMar Campbell won low gross honors in the mixed scotch foursome, with an 84, while net winners included Mrs. H. H. Hughes and E. S. Marlow, 86-19, 67; Mrs. A. D. Kane and V. G. Myers, 95-26, 69; Mrs. Leo Gaffney and J. W. Harvey, 90-17, 73, and Mrs. V. G. Myers and C. F. Price, 97-24, 73.

C. R. Lucas won the putting contest after a playoff with R. W. Harvey.

BEAVER DAM

R. Mills and A. M. Woodside tied for the Marmion trophy in Beaver Dam's biggest day in years, according to pro Cliff Spencer. They will play-off this week. Mills scored 77-10, and Mills 80-10, but the new handicap rule is that no net scores may go under the 70 mark.

Men's driving honors went to Joe Balestri, 340 yards with J. Woodside next, 320 yards, while C. E. Purdy chipped within 18 inches from the cup from 150 yards for approaching honors, with H. J. Stevens second and C. W. Griffin won the putting finals over H. A. Strong.

Honors in the women's play went to: driving—Mrs. R. Murphy and Mrs. C. E. Purdy, second; approaching—Mrs. C. E. Purdy, with Mrs. C. T. Frownfelter second, and putting, Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, with Mrs. P. Fogarty runner-up.

Mrs. C. E. Purdy cleaned up in the women's tournaments, winning the spring match play event over Mrs. Earl Strong, 2 and 1; with Mrs. H. S. Range winning the consolation over Lila Sari, 1 up. Mrs. Purdy and Mrs. J. P. Strong tied in the nine-hole handicap play with 41, 7—34 and 48, 14—34, with Mrs. W. L. O'Brien, 53, 18—35 and Mrs. W. Haas, 55, 17—38, among the prize winners.

INDIAN SPRING

Birdies were a dime a dozen at Indian Spring as Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, and Earl McAleer, southpaw ace from the same club, broke all even with host pro Al Jamison and Jerry Hart.

The foursome manufactured 17 birdies, with Jamison getting seven, four in a row on the back nine, 14 through 17. Cox had a 68, Jamison 69, McAleer 70, all under par, while Hart was highest in the group with a regulation 71.

Jimmy Malseed won the flag tournament, finishing 10 feet from the cup on the twentieth hole with 88-25, 63, while Joe Wilson had 75-10, 65, 20 feet from the pin, and Earl Clary was third, in the cup on the nineteenth with 76-9, 67.

COLUMBIA

Capt. F. S. Parks and Maj. Francis led the Cummings Cup qualifiers at Columbia with a best ball of 69, and will meet Martin McCarthy and George Miller next Sunday for the trophy. The latter team had 71 best ball. The 1939 championship team of Maury Nee and R. L. Finkenstaedt was broken up, as the latter is out of town, and thus the two low teams will battle it out for the title. Nee and his new partner, Tommy Webb, and Bart Yount and Earl Skinker were each a stroke back with 72.

The best-ball two-ball event went to George V. Loving and Ulysses Butler, with 77-17, 60, while E. M. Pusey and L. L. Williams had 81-20, 61, a score matched by W. W. Dean and Mack Langford, with 74-13, 61.

Cunningham Runs 4:15.6 Mile for Stadium Mark

Most of the new records were not unusually good. However, the feat of Hammacher, a Maryland freshman, who leaped 22 feet 6 inches to a broad jump mark, is worthy of attention.

The feats of the come-backing George Bogan also were outstanding for the former Tech High School star has had limited time for practice this spring. Bogan ran the 220 in 22.4 and the 100 in 10.3.

Chevy Chase Tourney to Von Strembel

McClure Is Double Victor; Holzberg Also Triumphs At Washington Club

The Victor Kaufmann Memorial Day Cup at Chevy Chase, a match play against par event, went to H. von Strembel, of the German embassy, who finished four up on perfect figures.

S. R. Prince jr., was two up, and John Brawner, with a one-over par 70, finished 1 up. Four tied all even with old man par, W. G. Brantley, L. B. Platt, Lewis Clark and George Elliott.

WASHINGTON

Maj. R. B. McClure, medalist in the club championship, continued his low scoring spree by winning low gross honors on the 18-hole medal event with a 72. Low net honors went to J. E. McCabe, 79-14, 65, with W. H. Pardo second, 87-21, 66.

John Holzberg won the Mosby Memorial putting contest with 32 putts.

Favorites advanced in the first round of match play in the club championship, Maj. McClure being within a stroke of par in winning 2 and 1 over C. E. Pardoe while Ralph Fowler won 2 and 1 over Holzberg in another feature. A. G. Dezendorf came within 2 inches of scoring an ace on the par four 305-yard first hole, easily dropping a putt for an eagle deuce after the ponderous tee shot.

Championship Flight

Dr. W. R. McLister defeated Dr. W. M. Ballinger, 5 and 4; Maj. E. A. Argo defeated F. S. Pomeroy, 5 and 4; L. H. Whitten defeated E. A. Martin, 2 and 1; Maj. R. B. McClure defeated C. H. Pardoe, 2 and 1; Ralph Fowler defeated John Holzberg, 2 and 1; P. E. Early defeated J. C. G. Corcoran, 2 and 1; Frank Williams defeated D. B. Tuxhorn, 7 and 6.

Second Flight

Elmer Jenkins defeated C. H. Dixon, 3 and 2; G. H. Bailey, jr., defeated Paul Campbell, 1 up, 19 holes; H. F. Hagenbuckle defeated Ray Dufour, 3 and 2; R. P. Harrell defeated J. G. Wells, 1 up, 19 holes.

Third Flight

R. E. Hotze defeated M. R. Palmer, 3 and 2; Dr. H. O. House defeated J. M. Reed by default; R. L. Nagle defeated Dr. James Hawfield, 6 and 5; F. N. Stricklin defeated L. Paxon, 7 and 6.

Fourth Flight

L. E. Greene defeated Guy Chase, 1 up; V. M. Hoffman defeated L. L. Lewis, 4 and 3; K. P. Haynes defeated W. Kingswell, 2 up.

CONGRESSIONAL

George Ford and J. M. Trice tied in the match play against par event at Congressional, each besting perfect figures by three holes. The spring match play handicap tournament advanced to the finals in the latter flights

Class B

E. B. Collins and George DeWitt, all even (to playoff); P. R. Evans defeated Dr. Noah Pomeroy, 4 and 2.

Class C

Myron Davy defeated H. E. Randel, 4 and 2.

Class D

B. P. Cooper defeated H. Swaart, 3 and 2; T. Blouke and C. A. Leoffler, all even (to playoff).

WOODMONT

Dr. G. Friedman finished in the cup on the nineteenth hole to win the flag tourney at Woodmont, while Jack Schulman finished on the edge of the nineteenth green, and William Wolf in the fairway on the first extra hole. Lou Harris and R. A. Phillipson finished in the cup on the eighteenth.

First Flight

Howard Nordlinger defeated A. E. Steinem, 3 and 2; Lou Harris defeated R. Goldsmith, 2 and 1; R. A. Phillipson defeated W. Ilch, 4 and 3; E. Melnicker defeated Nathan Wallach, 4 and 3.

Second Flight

George Jacobson defeated Dave Dubb, 2 and 1; Ned Bord defeated L. W. Jacobs, 1 up; M. Gerwirz defeated Al Goldstein, default.

CAPITAL

Playing the back nine in 31, four under par, Frank White won the Flag Tournament at Capital by finishing 20 feet from the twentieth cup with a subpar 69. White had an eagle and two birdies on the second nine

Other winners included J. A. Walker, 210 yards up the twentieth fairway; R. M. Weisberg, 185 yards; W. H. Mylander, 175 yards, and three in the cup on the nineteenth hole; W. C. Whittle, G. E. Getty and D. H. MacNeal.

R. B. Duncan finished 3 feet, 6 inches from the cup on a 75-yard approach to win the pitching contest, while George Borsari was 5 feet 4 inches away. The putting went to L. J. Manders, jr., and H. L. Grey.

BELLE HAVEN

Mrs. Jack Howard and Everett Clark tied the mixed-scotch foursome event at Belle Haven with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Knight, who were paired by the luck of the draw. The winning net score was 34. Mrs. Edwin Pierce and Henry Anderson were next with 35.

Paul Lipps, one of the most improved golfers of the Alexandria Club, won the Tomstone Tournament by holing out on the nineteenth hole, scoring an 81 and subtracting a 14 handicap for a net 67. J. Randall Caton was second, playing his final shot on the green of the first extra hole while J. B. Murphy finished his round in the cup on 18.

One of the largest crowds in years turned out.

ANACOSTIA

Harry Graham enrolled several additional competitiors in the spring match play tournament at Anacostia, to bring the total entries to 104. Jim Gipe took the lead at the end of the halfway mark of the 36-hole qualifying with a 67, two under par. Medal play will continue through Sunday.

ARMY AND NAVY

F. Reagen won the Flag Play at Army and Navy, playing his last shot a foot from the cup on the eighteenth green, while Commander J. S. Phillips was 18 inches away from the hole and Capt. R. D. Workman 7 yards from the cup for third.

Lady Jack, Gardner Hallman Entry, Winner in Manor Show

Takes Two Blues Before Record Crowd at Brooke Johns' Farm

By Ann Hagner.

Lady Jack, big brown hunter-jumper, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman, yesterday won two blues at the Manor Hunt's first annual horse show at Brooke Johns' farm, near Norbeck, Md., to be the biggest ribbon winner of the day's outing.

Before the largest crowd to witness a local horse show this year, Lady Jack, with Mrs. Hallman up, had a perfect round in the class for ladies' hunters, defeating more than 25 hunters. Second went to Jackie Warren, 16-year-old Woodrow Wilson student, on her mare, Fair Laun.

Lady Jack, daughter of the well-known sire, McDonnough, also triumphed in the knockdown-and-out class, when she was ridden by Mr. Hallman. After two jump-offs with Elizabeth Lyons' Crocus, with the fences at 5½ feet, the Hallman mount finally bested Crocus' performance by one hind tick to win the blue.

Black Caddy Wins

Hardest won ribbon of the day was taken by Fred Hughes, jr., with his Black Caddy, in the class for handy hunters. Before the class was run off it was announced that Hughes would show the course to the rest of the exhibitors.

The timekeeper did not know that Caddy was also exhibiting in the class at the same time and did not set his stopwatch during a smooth round, thus making it necessary for Hughes to do the whole thing over again. Luck was with him, however, for his horse performed the second time as well as the first and was able to take the blue ribbon, defeating Katherine Stone, ridden by Mickey Magill, and Golden Glow, with Owner Eddie Talbert up.

Pony Races Thrill

Black Cady came close to another win in the triple bar class, after only four horses managed to go clean over the two fences in the ring, but in a jump-off with W. O. Welsh's Elziro, Caddy had two ticks and won second place.

The pony races, which wound up a morning session of junior events, had the spectators as thrilled as did the horse races later in the afternoon. The event for small ponies was taken by Ralph Kirk on Valiant, and the one for large ponies went to Dean Rathbun, jr., who won going away on his breedy-looking pony, Chitchat.

2 Sandlotters Injured in Pick-up Game

A sandlot game on the North Ellipse diamond yesterday put two amateurs out of commission, one with a broken leg, the other with deep spike wounds.

Downey Kent, 27, of Laurel, Md., playing first base in a pick-up game, collided with Raymond Kaldenback, 37, of 809 North Highland street, Arlington, Va., the former chasing a high fly and the latter beating it down the first base line. Kent was treated for a fractured left leg at Sibley Hospital. Kaldenback was able to return to his home after his cuts were dressed.

Argyle Golf Play

Elmer Parsley topped a heavy turnout in the annual Memorial Day Play Tourney at Argyle, playing his allotted shot a foot from the cup on the twentieth, or second extra hole.

Other winners in order included Paul Hathaway, 6 feet from the twentieth cup; E. L. Mifflin, in the nineteenth cup; George Bond, 15 inches from the nineteenth cup; Bert Drott, 10 feet off the nineteenth green; Nolan Gibson, 12 feet away from the green; Elmer Parsley, playing two rounds, 15 feet short of the cup; A. G. F. Woods, 16 feet away, and Felix Altrup, 375 yards down the nineteenth fairway.

Four tied, all completing their rounds in the cup on the eighteenth, C. Babcock, Fred Murray, Cliff Scoggins and Sydney Sherwood.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

The Nats' Man of the Month for May is fleet George Case, base-stealing leftfielder, who clinched the honors yesterday by his performance in the double-header with the Athletics.

Case, earning five points for his play in the twin bill, overtook Taft Wright for the honor and compiled 36 points for the month to Wright's 32. He will be rewarded with a $50 merchandise order to be presented him by The Washington Post.

Case, a consistent hitter throughout the month, having boosted his average to nearly .300 after a poor start in April, profited in the Man of the Month contest by his frequent stolen bases. Yesterday he stole three bases to improve his total to 19, more than twice as many as any rival for the honors.

Alex Alexandra, with his pitching feats of the past month, made a sensational finish, to take third honors in the Man of the Month contest with a total of 24 points. Buddy Lewis was fourth with 22 points.

The 20 points distributed on the basis of yesterday's twin bill were awarded as follows:

To Alexandra, seven points, because he held the A's to four hits in the first game, and produced Washington's only run with a home run.

To Case, five points, because he singled twice in three official trips to the plate in the first game and stole a base, and because in the second game he made two important hits and stole two bases.

To Jake Early, three points, because his double and triple in the second game figured in five Washington runs.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he hit a second-game home run with a man on base.

To Ken Chase, two points, because he pitched seven scoreless innings and won the second game.

George Case	36	Rick Farrell	10
Taft Wright	32	Dutch Leonard	8
Alex Alexandra	24	Buddy Myer	7
Buddy Lewis	22	Joe Haynes	7
Cecil Travis	20	Walter Masterson	5
Bobby Estalella	17	Charles Gelbert	5
Jimmy Wasdell	16	Ken Chase	5
Joe Kragauskas	13	Angelo Giuliani	4
Johnny Welaj	13	Sammy West	3
Jake Early	13

Eastern Nine Seeks Third Straight Interhigh Title Today

Guyonmen Face Central At Stadium

'Puddin' Lovett Gets Pitching Nod for Eastern; His Foe Will Be Rozzelle

Eastern High, whose baseball clubs under the guidance of the veteran Chief Guyon have won eight out of the last ten annual interhigh titles, will be gunning for its third straight championship today when it encounters Central's roistering crew at Griffith Stadium, starting at 3:30 p. m.

Last year and the year before it was "Lefty" Stockwell and "Rip" Carver upon whom the White Tide pinned its successful title hopes. This time it's a hurler with an equally distinguished nickname and certainly as much talent. He's "Puddin" Lovett, whose chunky right arm has been involved in every Eastern triumph of the season, and whose eye at the plate earned him top ranking over all high school batsmen in the regular series.

Dick Rozzelle, Central 125-pound control artist, is scheduled to oppose the fire-balling of Lovett. He is one of several veterans on the Mount Pleasant squad, had a shaky start in series play, but has gradually improved until there's a possibility he's the most dependable moundsman in the high schools.

Eastern Came Back

Today's final and crucial clash marks the end of the new system tried out for the first time this year. Each team won its respective divisional title, though the manner of winning in both cases was something for the books.

Eastern dropped its first game of the season and was prematurely counted out of the race. With the complete collapse of Anacostia, the hottest nine in the East section, Eastern gradually came back, however, and was presented with the title when the cellar finisher, Tech, trounced Anacostia in the finale.

Except for a forfeited game, allowed it through the use of an ineligible player by Wilson, Central might also have been an also-ran. Purely on the strength of games won and lost either Roosevelt or Western deserved the West section berth in today's game. In Central's favor, however is the fact that it put on pressure when the last of the season approached, mainly through the slugging of Benny Steiner, and won with a fancy flourish.

Central Favored

Unless they have one of their "off" days, which have occurred several times so far, Central should win today's game. Little comparison can be drawn as to the power of either team, because they haven't played the same teams in the series, but what comparison there is gives the edge to the Blue.

Central's team batting record of .283 overshadows Eastern's by several points, and it has six sluggers, including Rozzelle, who might break up the game at any time. Besides Lovett's consistent hitting and hurling, Eastern can depend on only two, or maybe three, players in the pinches.

North-South Skeet Shoot Here Draws Record Entry

Young Webster Lieb, Last Year's Winner, Heads Strong Field in National Capital Event

The North-South shoot of the National Capital Skeet Club has attained a prominence in the clay bird world that ranks it as the No 1 club shoot of the year. It is eclipsed only by the Nationals.

The sixth annual event will get under way at 9 a. m. Saturday, with the .410 championship, which was captured last year by the Ambler, Pa., lad, Webster Lied, who set a new world's record of 97, beating out George Deyoe, who had equaled the record 96.

Lied will be back again this year, shooting under the colors of the Twin Pike Gun Club. With as much improvement in his shooting this season as he showed last, there is little doubt but that he will be right up in the top flight this year.

The entry list has mounted with each shoot until more than 200 were competing at the last one. There is every indication that the list will be even larger this year.

Entries have already been received from the San Monica first and second teams, the East Texas Gun Club, the Dallas Gun Club, the Forrest City team of Savannah, Ga., and the Radio Gun Club of Boston. From the New England section Henry Allen, president of the national association, notes the largest individual representation to any shoot that he has ever seen.

Dr. Bob Vance and Dick Shaughnessy, Massachusetts' outstanding shooters, will be back. The latter, a youngster of 18, but nevertheless coholder of the world's .410 record in 1937 and several times a champion.

Frank Kelly, of Orange, N. J., captain of the All-American Skeet team in 1937-38, who in 1935 took the 20-gauge championship here, and the individual championship in 1936, when he missed a perfect score by only one bird.

FRANK R. KELLY

Frank Traeger and Ed Garland, of the Roseland's wrecking crew; Lew Delmonico, of the Loantaka Club, and Dave Sklar, of the famous Valhalla team.

And local shooters will be well represented—many able to step in and take any match. There is George Deyoe, this year's defending champion; Dr. Don Johnson and R. E. Stuart. While for the ladies, two of the outstanding shots of the country, Mrs. Albert W. Walker and Mrs. William C. Coe.

Mexican Embassy to Honor Joe Silva This Afternoon

Scrapper From Mexico, Foe of Archibald Here Monday, Will Be Greeted by Dr. Najera

Joe Silva, Mexican fighter, who meets Joey Archibald, world's featherweight champion, Monday night at Griffith Stadium, will be welcomed to town today by members of the Mexican Embassy.

Members of the embassy staff yesterday said Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador, will receive Silva this afternoon at the chancery, 2829 Sixteenth street northwest, Promoter Joe Turner announced.

Already two days late in arriving, the 21-year-old Mexican fighter was said to be en route here from Philadelphia last night to finish training for the 10-round nontitle fight with Archibald.

Dr. Najera informed the local boxing moguls he is keenly interested in boxing and baseball and that he also is interested in the boxing career of Silva, who was born in Mexico City and whose uncle was a former Mexican army captain.

Jack Laken, Silva's manager, will extend an invitation to the Ambassador and members of the Embassy staff to attend the Archibald fight Monday as their guests, Turner said.

The Mexican fighter, who hopes to be the first to beat the featherweight champion in Washington, will be welcomed today at the embassy by Senor Don Luis Quintanilla, minister resident; Dr. Rafael Fuentes, counselor; Dr. Roberto Cordova, legal counselor; Raimundo Cuervo, second secretary, and Justo Sierra, third secretary.

Outfielders Collide, One Dies, Neck Broken

Detroit, May 30 (AP).—Two outfielders in a neighborhood baseball game collided while going after a fly ball today and Harry Newman, 25, died of a broken neck. The other was not injured.

Baer and Nova End Training For Their Scrap

Maxie Still Clowns As He Finishes Up; Fans Are Stirring

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 30.—Max Baer went through his clowning exercise routine, Lou Nova took a belt or two at the light and heavy bags, and with that the two wound up training today for their fight in Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

From now until they turn up at the State athletic commission offices for the weigh-in Thursday noon they'll rest. Then they'll rest some more until the bell sends them out abouf 9 p. m. (E. S. T.) for 15 rounds or less, the winner to get a crack at the heavyweight championship, probably in September.

With only some 48 hours to go, there still remained little to choose between the two fighters. Baer, at 30, is a large question mark. The former champion has trained seriously for a fight for the first time in his career, hasn't even had a cigarette during the six weeks of his preparatory routine, apparently is determined in his comeback campaign to regain the heavyweight heights, and has developed a "cute" left hand to go along with his haymaker right.

Nova, six years Baer's junior and making up in serious determination and confidence what he lacks in experience, is the faster of the two, has a troublesome left hand for any opponent, and is strong as a cement block. He not only feels he can take Maxie, but wants to do it quickly so that he can get at Joe Louis, for he is equally as confident he can turn the trick against the Brown Bomber—which is a good trick even if it doesn't work.

The betting was close to even money, with some gamblers willing to lean a point toward Baer—the early "future book" favorite of a couple weeks ago—and some equally ready to pin the short end of the odds on Nova. Even the "experts" were befuddled. In a poll of 50 boxing writers, managers and fighters taken today, Nova ruled a slight favorite at 26 to 24.

Star at Kentucky Signs With Orioles

Lexington, Ky., May 30 (AP).—Randall Phillips, captain of the University of Kentucky baseball team, said he had signed a contract to play profesional ball with the Baltimore Orioles of the International League and would leave today to join that club.

A native of Montgomery, Ala., Phillips played first base on the college nine and hit well over .500 while playing errorless ball. He was a regular end on the football team three years. His bachelor of arts degree will be sent him.

Syd Wooderson Does Second Fastest English Mile 4:74

London, May 30 (AP).—In pounding out the second fastest mile in England's history, Sydney Wooderson has shown he is nearing the peak of form for his appearance in the Princeton Invitation mile on June 17, when he will meet Glenn Cunningham and other crack American runners.

The skinny little solicitor, who sails June 7 on the Normandie for his first visit to the United States, did the mile in 4 minutes 7.4 seconds in the British games at White City yesterday despite his announced intention of running it no faster than 4:10.

"I really wasn't pointing at my record of 4:6.4, you know," he said later. "I just felt very well and ran faster than I had expected to."

"I think I am in good shape now. I intend to have a try at Jack Lovelock's record of 3:02.2 for the three-quarter mile next Sunday, just before I sail, and I am confident I will be even sharper then."

Wooderson's time yesterday was even more startling when the conditions were considered. A fire-fighting demonstration was going on at the field and he had to wait a full hour past the scheduled starting time before he got off the mark.

A water tank had collapsed and, though workmen had mopped up most of the water, enough remained to make the footing bad on the backstretch. Thick smoke still poured from a dummy airplane in the center of the field and Sydney got a chestful every time he went around.

He made light of these difficulties, though, and said his poor timing on the second lap might have prevented his setting a new record. He ran the first quarter in 61 seconds, the second in 64 and the third in 63. Then he gathered himself and turned in a 59.4 final to finish nearly 70 yards ahead of his closest pursuer, J. W. Alford.

Orioles Get Slugger

Knoxville, Tenn., May 30 (AP).—Secretary Edgar Allen of the Knoxville Baseball Club of the Southern Associatino annaunced today the sale of Lee Riley, slugging outfielder, to Baltimore of the International League.

All Terp Outfits Had Good Seasons Except Gridders

By the Associated Press.

Statisticians at the University of Maryland put the covers on the adding machines today and sighed that if the school hadn't had a football team—or had had a better one—the athletic season would have been brighter.

Maryland teams won 54 games and lost 25. Four were tied. All except the football aggregation won more than they lost. The eleven won 2 and lost 7. The final summary gave the school a 68 percentage for the year.

The freshmen did even better. They won 34 contests, lost 10 and were not tied. The freshmen eleven won three and lost two.

Endurance Wins For Bisons, 22-19, Over Maple Leafs

Buffalo, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—The Buffalo Bisons outlasted, but didn't outslug, the Montreal Maple Leafs in a long-winded International League game today by a 22-19 score.

It was the first game of a holiday double-header and took 3 hours and 13 minutes to decide.

The parade to the mound of practically all available pitching talent on both clubs featured the fray—along with five Buffalo homers. The Bisons used five pitchers, and the losers called on eight.

Royal Giants Play Black Tars Here

Norfolk's Black Tars, an early season conqueror, will provide the opposition Sunday afternoon when Ben Taylor's second place Washington Royal Giants are met in a 2 o'clock Negro Eastern League doubleheader at Griffith Stadium.

The Royal Giants definitely established themselves as a first half Negro Eastern League championship threat last Sunday when they upset the league-leading Belleville, Va., Grays.

AQUACADE AGAIN! Why Butch, you saw the bathing girls once.
BATHING GIRLS? Naw, Lefty, I just want to sit by the pool and dunk my poor tired dogs in the water. That's all.
"POOLE" $5

GENUINE IMPORTED BUCKSHEN $5

APPROVED BY THE SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO FEET

You won't be wishing for a cool pool in which to bathe your feet if you do your Summer walking in Buckskin shoes. Not just ANY buckskin, for most less costly grades must be stiffened with pore-sealing, cemented "backings" that make feet hot and uncomfortable. You'll want John Ward's genuine, imported South American Buckskin . . . a whale of a buy at $5 because it's so firm-bodied it holds its shape WITHOUT "backing" and therefore is so porous it lets your feet BREATHE!

Record Crowd Sees Most of Favorites Win; Daily Double Brings Only $10.60

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 30.—A crowd of 15,000 race goers constituting what was believed to be the largest attendance ever enjoyed by the Charles Town Jockey Club witnessed here today in the Decoration Day Handicap, sixth and headline offering, one of the most thrilling finishes of the meeting to date.

So close was the wind-up between E. K. Hillman's Star Mint and E. Johnson's Dun Lucky, that the placing judges caled upon the camera to help them decide the order. The photograph showed Star Mint, second choice in the wagering, the winner by a scant nose. Dun Lucky, an outsider in the betting, finished second. Third honors fell to Pradis, the choice, and fourth to Bargain Boy. Time for the mile and one-eighth journey was 1:53 3-5. The winner returned $7.20 for $2.

It was a holiday crowd in holiday spirit that witnessed the eight-race program. Although some of the horses failed to run strictly to dope, it was nevertheless a first-class day for the players of "chalk." The daily double was captured by Whisk Up, choice in the second event, and Mr. Deeds, the favorite in the third. More than 800 of the visitors held winning tickets on this combination, which returned $10.60.

Although the grandstand and the clubhouse were packed to capacity and while hundreds of visitors "parked" on the spacious lawns behind the grandstand, the fathering was unusually orderly. There was no sign of the ill humor that so often attends extremely large gatherings on unusually hot days. The betting was brisk.

In the feature, Dun Lucky, the outsider, might have won had Jockey Bobby Root not weakened right at the finish. Root was on top all the way with the Dunlin—Reclistant gelding, which A. Vesseli, aboard Star Mint, forced the pace from the start. Immediately after the break, some of the horses got into a tangle, with Jinneal and Groucher's Boy having all the worst of it.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo was the saddle star of the day. He rode four winners, including Whisk Up, Timetta, Trixie Lass, and Justa Pilgrim.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONSISTENT, $6.20, $4.00, $3.00; MISS TRYCOM, $5.40, $4.40; JUSTA JIMMIE, $4.00.

CONSISTENT, sent to front at once, shook off MISS TRYCOM to draw far out and win with speed in reserve. MISS TRYCOM, off well, forced early pace, dropped back and came again at end. JUSTA JIMMIE saved ground, moved up menacingly and weakened at end. GOLDEN KEY was listlessly handled. WHITE SWEETS had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:12. Off 3:14. Winner, W. Anderson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHISK UP, $4.80, $3.00, $2.80; SCOUT ROSE, $3.40, $2.80; LILTEEN, $5.00.

WHISK UP, closest to pace of SCOUT ROSE from start, wore down latter to get to front and came again under strong handling after being headed to win in concluding stride. SCOUT ROSE, well placed from start, moved up sharply in stretch while under punishment, but faltered when Johnson went to hand riding. LILTEEN had good speed to set pace, but weakened nearing end. ZIPPY closed full of run. SCHLEY PRINTZ was hard handled. ANNEKE was allowed to run out badly at first turn.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:48. Off 3:49. Winner, L. H. Nimkoff's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIXIE LASS, $6.60, $4.00, $3.40; LADY CIREK, $5.00, $3.80; WINNADEOS, $19.40.

TRIXIE LASS, steadied along while well placed, came to inside to save ground entering stretch, took command and was held to strong drive to end. LADY CIREK, outrun in early stages, came on outside while improving position and closed with good energy. WINNADEOS went closest to ELEANOR O's pace to stretch and fought it out willingly. ELEANOR O set good pace, but weakened when caught. BEAUFAST was caught in gate before start and rallied mildly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:45. Off 5:46½. Winner, E. K. Hillman's b. f. (4), by Brandon Mint—Binary Star. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR MINT, $7.20, $4.80, $3.60; DUN LUCKY, $14.80, $6.60; PRADIS, $3.00.

STAR MINT, rated while closest to DUN LUCKY'S pace, came to outside of pacemaker while under pressure and was up in final stride under strong handling. DUN LUCKY set good pace, saved ground, responded to intermittent punishment, but Root appeared to ride overconfidently at end. PRADIS had a rought trip and closed with good courage. BARGAIN BOY dropped back in early stages and came with rush at end. AUFOIN raced evenly in spots after being knocked back at start. GROUCHER'S BOY was hard ridden and weakened. JINNEAL pinched back at break.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:20. Off 6:22. Winner, Mrs. E. E. Black's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA PILGRIM, $8.20, $4.40, $2.80; KESWICK HILL, $8.60, $3.80; STEALING HOME, $2.60.

JUSTA PILGRIM, under good grip and carefully handled for half, drove into lead when asked and just lasted ahead of KESWICK HILL. The latter, distant trailer to mile, came with belated rush on outside and was going fastest at end. STEALING HOME raced well up and came with good courage at end. SILVERY WAY ran TERN HILL into submission and weakened. LIGHT ACTION was not a serious menace. HI ADA raced wide, moved up menacingly and weakened. TERN HILL set early pace and stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:50. Off 7:03. Winner, G. F. Cook's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLYMENE, $5.00, $4.20, $3.20; DUNSANY, $12.40, $6.80; BAV, $4.00.

CLYMENE, steadied along and saving ground while well placed, went to outside of DUNSANY to get to front and was kept to strong drive to hold sway thereafter. DUNSANY disposed of BROOKE HEROD to get to front, could not resist winner, but continued gamely when displaced. BAV, off slowly, came with rush in closing stages. TULEYRIES LAD, hard ridden, came menacingly approaching stretch and weakened. BROOKE HEROD set early pace and weakened at end.

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., May 30.
Dear Al:

Russell Oakes, former Baltimore Sun turf writer, leaves this week to take over a column job on the Daily Racing Form. Frank Cronin, of Lucky Lefty fame, will replace Oakes on the public address system as "the voice of Charles Town." R. Bernhardt, now under suspension for five days, will lose a lot of ground in his battle with W. Dufford for apprentice honors at the meeting. Dufford has eight winners. Thirty-one favorites have won here so far. W. W. Gift's Hepzabah bucked in a recent workout and will be on the shelf for a spell. Lest we forget, the "apple man" who stands along the walk to the train, has a big family of children and needs your patronage. Jockeys Balducci and J. A. Taylor left for Wheeling. Jockey Everson went to Delaware Park. Eugene Sweeney, of Upper Marlboro, brought in L. A. Lowe's Duchess Del. J. Brooks came with Turner Whiltshire's Plain Ace. Mrs. U. Webb has purchased Nathan Hale from R. B. Archer at private terms. This place doesn't seem the same with Tuer Sam absent. He is Delaware-Parking now. Whiley Pemberton has decided to stay here for the remainder of the meeting. Today was Preakness Day here in the mountains. I would have liked to have made book over in the free section on the hill at the first turn.

BILL.

First race—Boro Poker appears best suited of the ordinary ones gathered for this sprint. Likes the course and has been rounding into best shape while racing. Razzle Dazzle is far down the reserve list but would be a keen factor if sent postward. Windsor Boy has been tipped.

Second race—Adriatic gets my call in this field. This veteran held a track record here for a long time and is fit and ready again. Blind Talk was disqualified after running second last out. He had trouble himself on that occasion. Depinard seems best of the others.

Third race—Judge's Bid is third on the "also eligible" list and promises to get a change of riders. If he gets off the reserve list this may be a hop, skip and jump for the Judge. Counora promises to do a lot of running and is in light. Whittle Pete had trouble last out.

Fourth race—Nay Nay was nipped on the wire in that recent effort. Seems well suited by conditions here. Brain Child's last was a beaut and this one is due respect. Kitty's Rival has been performing in good fashion.

Fifth race—Unlimited was poorly handled in that last. I understand Palumbo will do the hustling and I'm going to string along. Lulu Khayyam has been kidding. Will break on top soon and lead all the way. Small Change is a doubtful starter and seems to be going off form.

Sixth race—Enthusiasm favors this abbreviated route. Doesn't appear ready for a longer distance. Lady Buck and Cat's Cradle will be right in the thick of contention. James Pal seems overweighted.

Seventh race—Monocle ran a fine race last out and promises to be a keen factor if not the winner. I'm going to string along. Westigal has plenty of speed now and is dangerous. Cartour, with Root up, should be close.

Eighth race—Big Bud has turned in two good tries and appears better suited than in either of the other races. **

Rookie Beats Hubbell, Dodgers Split Even With Giants

Casey Wins First Start For Brooklyn

Beats 'Meal Ticket,' 3-1 After Terrymen Win Opener, 5-4, Before 58,296

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 30.—Hugh Casey, making his first National League start, bested Carl Hubbell, the one-time Giant "meal ticket" in a 3-1 mound duel to give the Brooklyn Dodgers an even break with the Giants today before 58,296 fans.

The Giants won the opener, 5-4, as Harry Gumbert staggered through for his fifth victory of the season. He needed some help from Cliff Melton in the ninth, however.

Hubbell was on the short end of a 1-0 score for six innings in the second tilt, but then homers by Koy and Todd clinched the game—and retained fifth place in the standings—for the Dogers.

The crowd was the largest in New York since some 62,000 tried to crowd in to see the Giants and the Cards of St. Louis play on September 13, 1936. That crowd was never officially counted since many had their money refunded, refusing to stand to see the game

Everybody but the Umpire Is Going Somewhere

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

It looks something like Forty-second and Broadway here but it's home plate with the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees cavorting about in the second inning of their second game yesterday in Boston. George Selkirk (3), is scoring on Joe Gordon's double as Red Sox Catcher Moe Berg (22) rushes out to take the throw. Charles Keller (right), forms a one-man welcoming committee for Selkirk and Babe Dahlgren (12) walks nonchalantly to the plate, bat in hand. The referee, going no place, just stands there watching. Red Sox scored 7 runs, but that was not enough. Yankees scored 17

Cards Win, 7-2, Lose, 14-8 To Pittsburgh

St. Louis, May 30 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader here today, the Cards taking the opener, 7 to 2, and the Pirates the nightcap, 14 to 8. Johnny Mize hit a homer with two on in the first game. Johnny Rizzo hit two home runs and drove in a total of nine runs in the nightcap.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 30.—A wacky public, almost as dumb as the paid experts, has installed Max Baer a 7-to-5 favorite to beat Lou Nova Thursday night at the Yankee Stadium, willfully ignoring the emblazoned facts that Max is a reformed debaucher of 30, that he burned up millions of dollars of John Doe's dough by chucking the title to Jim Braddock, quit to Louis, and twice retired.

CONSIDINE

But the public can take it, particularly from Max. The best description of a true boxing fan is that he is a bloke who is willing to give Max Baer another chance. It's either a tribute to Baer, or a mark of the abysmal density of fight fans, because he has been breaking their hearts for close to a decade now and can be depended upon only to be undependable. It is doubtful if Max won a single decision against a sparring partner, all during his formal sweating at Grossinger's. But that doesn't matter either. He's still favorite to beat a good young guy, hungry with ambition, and a better boxer now than Max ever was.

It seems to make no difference to the fight fans that Max, who really wants to fight Galento, has looked worse this time than ever before, and that most of the responsible observers believe he'll have to knock out Nova to win the fight.

But what is being chiefly overlooked by the boys who want to rush from the WPA cashier's cage to the nearest bookie is that Baer won't have too much heart in this fight. For if he forces himself to go out there swinging against Nova, and knocks the younger man down and out with a couple of those overhand rights, he will have fought himself into a return bout with Joe Louis, and though Max may speak with considerable warmth about what he is going to do with Louis, and for whom he is going to do it, everybody knows that he never wants to set foot in the ring again with the Bomber.

Baer might be entitled to his favorite's position if he needed the money. The love of country, family and prestige are cold and flabby incentives, compared to an athlete's hot lust for dough. But Max has money. That is one of the incredible paradoxical things about him. He, the perfect wastrel, has come through the Sodom and Gomorrah section of his life with an annuity that would clog up Mammoth cave. In fact, nobody can quite understand why the hell he is still fighting—least of all the wife who civilized this strange curly-headed satyr. Some believe that all those punches he took on his laughing face have made him a little punchy, but Max is the first to deny this. "How could they have made me punchy?" He once demanded. "I was punchy before anybody ever hit me."

Should Be 3-to-1 Choice

Off their fighting equipment, Nova should be a 3-to-1 favorite, instead of the underdog. He is younger, stronger, quicker and boxes better. While Baer is laughing at him, or pulling at his pants, or counting the house or watching the clock, or catching his breath after a fighting flurry, Nova should hit him with a million scoring jabs and land enough of his responsible-looking left hooks to scramble Max's face and impress the judges. All he must evade is Baer's long round-about right, which is telegraphed so long in advance that a Western Union boy helps deliver it. It might be wise, too, to keep an eye on Baer's cockeyed left hook, particularly if Lou goes through with his plan to fight Max from the inside. But there is nothing consistent about this punch, and even Baer, a man of easy enthusiasm, mistrusts it.

The trouble with diagnosing a Baer fight, however, is that fistic equipment often has little to do with the outcome. Schmeling was a better boxer and almost as good a hitter, and a much more brilliant tactician. He had Baer completely winded, and about to fold, when Max hit him with a sucker punch that knocked the German stiff. Baer knocked out Ernie Schaaf on the last punch of a bout in which he was only mediocre. From a strict interpretation of the boxing rules, Carnera was leading Max up to the time he was knocked out, even though Max had floored Da Preem (and himself) a half a dozen times.

Baer can hit. That's enough to con and hypnotize the average fight fan. He may be everything his worst critics say he is; he may have curdled the million dollar gate for all time by his action against Louis, and provided one unpardonable chapter after another in the story of boxing. But he can hit, and the crowd always will follow the hitter. A punch is the last thing a man loses. There is something hollow-looking about Baer's once magnificent legs and chest, but the old zing is still in his right fist. He can hit, and if you don't believe it look at the odds. Certainly he has nothing else to recommend him against a young guy who should give him his most abusive boxing lesson since he was slapped dizzy by Loughran, lo these many years ago.

Jim Londos Rematched With Terror

Jim Londos, original world's wrestling champion, will have two masked men to amuse himself with tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium when he meets The Golden Terror.

The Terror, who hides his identity coyly under a hood, staged a public workout at Turner's Arena yesterday and inveigled Promoter Joe Turner to permit his manager, also a hooded gentleman, to work in his corner.

While The Terror's manager often takes a hand in the ring when his pudgy charge gets in a difficult spot, Londos probably will be unperturbed by the sight of two masked men. He already has bounced The Terror around in Philadelphia on a card which was greeted by bored fans with overripe eggs and fruit.

Detroit Splits Double-Header With Chicago

Tigers Drop Opener 6-2; Return to Get 16 Hits and 8-2 Victory

Chicago, May 30.—Detroit's Tigers, held in check by the veteran, Ted Lyons, in the opening game, came back to pound three Chicago White Sox pitchers for 16 hits and an 8-to-3 triumph in the nightcap today to gain an even split in the holiday double-header. Chicago's largest baseball crowd of the season, 35,000, saw the 38-year-old Lyons score his fourth straight victory in the opener, 6 to 2.

Paul Trout received credit for the Detroit triumph, though Al Benton was rushed to his rescue in the seventh after the now-bespectacled Trout had yielded only four hits in six innings.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

For six weeks now, anglers from all over the East have been awaiting word of the arrival of the bluefish schools. At Oregon Inlet, N. C., where we usually get the first run of big ones about May 1, they are still expecting. And in view of the catch made by Capt. Crawford Savage off Ocean City on Monday, we feel that we are safe in saying now, that for the second year in succession these savage warriors have passed up the North Carolina coast.

Joe Luke, Wilmington sportsman, well known to local anglers, was fishing with his party on Crawford's Hilda II on Green Run Shoals, some 18 miles southeast of the inlet, where a few birds had been sighted, but the going was just as slow as the birds were lethargic until 9:30. When, within the space of a few minutes, the sky was literally filled with wheeling and diving birds, and the water was lashed to a white foam by a school of feeding bluefish, full 5 acres in extent.

For just a trifle over 15 minutes these crazed, feeding blues stayed on top, but in that time Capt. Savage and his party had taken 35 that weighed from 3 to 4 pounds—the first catch of the season, outside of a single one or two, that we have news of, anywhere north of Hatteras.

But from their actions, every indication that there should be good fishing, given reasonably warm weather, for it was the warm skin of water on top that had brought the silversides up and the blues after them. The deep water temperatures are still pretty low.

Bluefish Coming Up

In the Chesapeake, along the western shore of Virginia, we have had reports for the past several weeks of bluefish being taken in the nets. First it was far down in the section around Messick, but now they seem to be coming on up, for Capt. T. S. Clopton, of Gloucester Point, told us yesterday of a catch of really big ones that run as large as 12 pounds, above the York River.

Catches by netters mean little or nothing beyond showing that the blues are in the bay and schooling, but any day, given the right conditions, might well find them taking a trolled lure or following up a chum slick.

The State of Maryland is fast attaining a place of prominence in the piscatorial world—for being the only State in the whole country, with any appreciable number of black bass in its streams, that does not afford the protection this grand game fish needs if it is to continue to grace our waters.

The House of the South Carolina Legislature passed its bass bill making the sale of black bass unlawful anywhere in the State, and it was acceptable to the Senate, which added an amendment making the no-sale provision country-wide.

There is little doubt but what this provision will be acceptable to the House when the bill goes into conference this week.

'Pound Foolish'

How much longer are Maryland legislators to continue their "penny wise and pound foolish" policy because a relatively few commercial fishermen in one or two counties feel their inalienable rights are being taken from them in not being allowed to take black bass, which, if they aren't bought by the State for restocking in other waters, must be bootlegged if they cross hte State line.

Although the channel bass are continuing to hold the spotlight in the Oregon Inlet fishing, another week or two will find the greatest concentration along the Virginia and Maryland beaches until they start to make their southing again in August.

In the meantime, the big stripers have started to take trolled lures in no uncertain fashion, and although the average fish run between three and eight pounds, there are occasional ones that make the 300-mile trip seem as nothing.

Capt. Sam Tillet has been in them throughout the past week, the daily catches running anywhere from 26 to 56.

A. I. B. Essay Contest Won by Arthur Meade

William Blum Is Second and James Bridges Is Third

Hilleary G. Hoskinson, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, announced yesterday the winners of the 1939 essay contest conducted by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, and sponsored by the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Arthur E. Meade, connected with the Lincoln National Bank's branch office at Seventeenth and H streets northwest, was awarded first prize, which will be a trip to the annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association to be held at Hot Springs, Va., June 8 to 11. Mr. Meade wrote on the subject "Supervision of a Bank's Investment Portfolio Under Present Conditions." He also won first prize in last year's essay contest.

William Blum, jr., of the National Savings & Trust Co., won second prize with his essay on the same subject on which Mr. Meade wrote. Second prize is a cash award of $75. Mr. Blum won third prize in the 1936 essay contest. James F. Bridges, of the Riggs National Bank, won third prize with his essay on the subject "Undeveloped Fields for Bank Loans." Third prize is a cash award of $50.

Judges of the contest were Robert H. Lacey, cashier, Columbia National Bank; L. P. McLachlen, president, McLachlen Banking Corporation; Charles H. Doing, vice president, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and James A. Soper, vice president and cashier of the Lincoln National Bank.

The winner will appear on the program and read his essay at the bankers' convention. The three winning essays will be printed in the proceedings of the convention.

Kaufman Opens New Branch

The Henry J. Kaufman Advertising Agency, of Washington, D. C., announces the opening of a Baltimore, Md., branch in the Court Square Building. The Baltimore division of the Washington Agency which is headed by Henry J. Kaufman, will be under the direction of Marx S. Kaufman. He was, successively, assistant advertising manager of American Safety Razor Corporation of New York; advertising manager of May Oil Burner Corporation of Baltimore, and, more recently, creative head and partner of a Baltimore advertising agency.

Alex. Brown & Sons Open Two New Branch Offices

A more active role in the securities business for Alex. Brown & Sons, of Baltimore, one of the oldest investment banking firms in the country, was indicated yesterday in the announcement that Jo M. French would on June 5 become manager of a New York office, 2 Wall street, and that on the same date the firm would open a Chicago office under the management of D. Dean McCormick.

Mr. French was formerly with Harriman, Ripley & Co., Inc., having been continuously associated with that organization since its establishment in 1934, and prior to that, for a period of almost ten years, was with the National City Co.

Mr. McCormick, who has spent the last 13 years with the Chicago office of Lee Higginson Corporation, has been identified with the investment business for 16 years.

The principal office of Alex. Brown & Son, will continue to be located in Baltimore, where the firm was founded in 1800. In addition to the New York and Chicago offices, the firm will maintain its present office in Washington. The firm holds memberships on the New York and Baltimore stock exchanges.

Hughes to Head New York Bankers

New York, May 30 (AP).—The New York State Bankers Association announced today the election of Joseph E. Hughes, president of the Washington Irving Trust Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., as president. The election was on board the S. S. Manhattan, en route home from a convention cruise to Bermuda.

W. Randolph Burgess, vice chairman of the National City Bank, was elected vice president. C. W. Bowen, president of the Stewart National Bank of Livonia, N. Y., was elected treasurer.

Daily Oil Output Gains 146,574 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., May 30 (AP).—With Texas production rising sharply, the flow of the Nation's crude increased 146,574 barrels daily to a daily average of 3,587,540 barrels, the Oil and Gas Journal said today. Oklahoma production declined 13,525 barrels daily to 449,725.

East Texas wells poured out 73,899 barrels more daily to reach 446,247, while Texas as a whole increased 176,654 to 1,461,989. Illinois production climbed 3,428 to 218,128, and production in the Rocky Mountain area was up 5,770 to 78,940. Louisiana edged up 625 to 267,960. Kansas production slumped 13,800 to 161,750.

Rukeyser Says: Advancement Depends on Research

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator

New York, May 30.—Competent business managers, recognizing that in life nothing is permanent except change, seek to keep abreast of the procession through unremitting expenditures for research.

Thus progressive industry has been linked with science and invention. This note is stressed in the industrial exhibits at the Fairs in New York and San Francisco.

In spite of lavish governmental aid agriculture has lagged behind in scientific effort. Its efforts in the realm of research have been niggardly in comparison with that of industry.

The chemical industry, which has made extraordinary strides since the war, has consistently spent between 2 per cent and 3 per cent of their annual sales receipts on research, and all industry has spent about ½ of 1 per cent of the value of goods sold in research.

Agriculture, it has been computed, spends only 1-7 of 1 per cent on research, including the outlays of the Federal Government and those of the various State experimental stations.

Farm Research Needed

Referring to this situation, L. F. Livingston, head of the agricultural extension division of E. I. du Pont de Nemours, urged that farm research be heightened by transferring part of the public funds used for farm relief to scientific work.

"To put agriculture on an equal footing with industry in research effort," Mr. Livingston pointed out, "would require the expenditure of three and one-half times the present agricultural research budget. I know that some of you think this is excessive, but I am convinced that those who think so are wrong.

"Why shouldn't the corn growers, to mention one branch of agriculture, support special projects having to do with increased industrial use of corn or corn-stalks?

Corn-Stalk Question

"One of the primary difficulties in using corn-stalks is not chemical, but the moving of them from the field to the factory. Some of the specific problems are: 'Can they be used in a compact form?' 'If so, what should that form be?' 'What is the best equipment to put them into the required form?' 'Should it be portable?' 'What are the economics of the entire propositions?'"

In relating this problem to the chemical industry, Mr. Livingston added: "Industry is the buyer and agriculture is the seller. The wise seller brings his product to the market in the most attractive form possible in order to obtain the highest price possible. He gets the price because the product is in the form most useful for the buyer. It is because of these fundamentals that I believe farm organizations can profit by supporting research work dealing with their own problems.

"The volume of raw materials which the chemical industry of the country can consume will be greatly increased whenever the seller (the farmer) can bring his products to the factories in more suitable form and at the price which the chemist can economically pay. Remember, American industry wants to buy from the American farmer, but I maintain there is a farm research job which it will pay agriculture to form."

Science and invention will through the years contribute enormously to farm betterment, and to the better balancing of the national economy. But obviously that is a long term policy. In the meantime, something akin to a two-price system is indicated in order to establish a farm-industrial parity. Industrial costs and prices are above the world price level, reflecting tariff and social legislation.

National Steel Dividend

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 30.—National Steel Corporation, at a meeting of the board of directors today, declared a dividend of 40 cents per share on its capital stock for the second quarter of 1939, it was announced by E. T. Weir, chairman. There are 2,198,967 shares outstanding, and the dividend will be payable June 30 to stockholders of record on June 20.

5th District Volume Cut by Coal Strike

Reserve Bank Says About 150,000 Miners Were Idle

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 30.—The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today there was a "material decrease" in consumer purchasing power in the Fifth Federal Reserve District in April and the first half of May as a result of the six-week biuminous coal miners' strike.

The strike, the bank said, "threw about 150,000 men out of work in the fifth district, including miners, employes of railroads engaged in hauling coal and workers in scattered industrial plants affected by coal shortage."

A local strike of tobacco factory workers in Richmond and Durham removed 2,000 men and women from pay rolls for one week in April, and there was a reduction of about 7 per cent in operating time in the district's cotton textile mills last month, it was pointed out.

On the other hand, construction work broadened further and increased activity on farms called for some additional agricultural workers. "However," the bank said, "the new jobs provided did not equal" the lay-offs of miners and others resulting from the mine strike.

Building permits issued in 31 cities last month, totaling $8,579,777, showed declines of 28 per cent from $11,904,407 in March and 3 per cent from $8,861,313 in April, 1938. Contracts actually awarded last month totaled $42,008,000, the highest figure for any month since March, 1930, and were 67 per cent above contracts totaling $25,114,000 awarded in April, 1938.

Automobile sales totaled $20,188 last month against $17,800 in April of last year and $14,092 in April, 1938. There were 55 commercial failures last month against 59 in March and 42 in April, 1938. Department store sales totaled $8,842,875, a 7 per cent drop from sales in March of this year and April of last year.

Winnipeg Wheat Prices Steady in Dull Trading

Winnipeg, May 30 (AP).—A quietly firm display at Liverpool, together with lack of southern interest due to the Memorial Day holiday which kept United States markets closed, held wheat futures steady throughout a dull session today. Quotations moved narrowly, and at the close were unchanged to ⅛ cent lower with May at 64⅝, July 65⅝@65¾ and October 67.

Export sales of Canadian wheat were estimated at less than 100,000 bushels.

Advertising Linage Gains 5.1% in Year

Chicago, May 30.—Newspaper advertising linage placed by retailers in 80 major cities during the week ended May 20 showed a gain of 5.1 per cent over the corresponding week of 1938, Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, reported today. The total for the year to date is also slightly ahead of the same period of 1938.

For the week ended May 20 retailers placed a total of 20,478,772 lines in their local newspapers, compared with 19,487,019 lines for the corresponding week last year. The cumulative total for the 20-week period ended May 20 was 380,409,915 lines, an increase of 0.3 per cent over the 379,425,504 lines reported for the same period of 1938.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

TROIKA'S SUMMER FAREWELL. Troika's owner, the chic and lovely Mrs. Helen Hamilton, has just called to say that she's decided to close Troika for the summer, after tonight.

So it's Troika tonight, or not until next fall. It's your last chance to enjoy Vanya's matchless dancing and the haunting violin of Sasha Lukas, to hear Luba Malina, of the big black eyes, sing "La Cucharacha" with gamin gayety, to see those wicked marionettes and treat your ears to Russian gypsy music. Importantly, too, it's your last chance to sip Mischa's vodka cocktails and feast on borscht with sour cream and chicken a la Kieff. Troika's summer closing always leaves an unfillable gap in the night spot picture. It's one of the few Russian luxury spots in the country, the only one in Washington.

Troika will open next fall on September 15, earlier than ever before. Mrs. Hamilton will spend a large part of the summer in New York, assembling, if possible, an even better revue than that of this season.

TUNE MEMORY CONTEST: There'll be "Tune Tests" in the King Cole Room every Wednesday, beginning tonight. At 11:30 ten tunes will be played, all numbers having been used at King Cole during the preceding week. If you can correctly name these tunes, you'll be the winner of two dinners at the Hour Glass. Um-m-m

CARLTON'S NEW MUSIC: Violinist Bert Bernath leads the new "Threesome" that has just made its bow in the Carlton cocktail lounge and will play from 5 to 7 and 9 to 11. Bert sings in half a dozen languages, and is a great favorite with the town's international groups. With him are Guitarist-Singer Tommy Suter and Pianist Charlie Bates.

DICK'S BIRTHDAY: Leader Dick Koons of the Mayflower Lounge Orchestra blushed to his eyes on Monday afternoon when his band burst loudly into "Happy Birthday" and then presented him with a midget cake with one candle and a very odd-looking bunch of flowers.

PENGUINS REMARKABLE BIRDS: Wardman's Manager George Johnson is going plumb overboard in singing the praises of the new Penguins who will make their bow in the Metronome Room tomorrow night. We understand the Penguins' dance music is versatile, original and glittering. We mean that they're good, plenty!

Metronome will be closed again tonight while decorators scramble feverishly in a last-minute rush to get everything ready for tomorrow's gala opening. A preview of the new wintry decorations shows icy blues, cool sparkling whites, many saucily strutting penguins of giant size.

MILTON THE PROPHET: Bac.: in the spring of '38, Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, said that the just-hatched "My Reverie" would be the big hit song of the year. Milton now prophesies a similar success for the new "Don't Worry About Me."

POWHATAN ROOF OPENS: That bright light in the sky tomorrow night will be the Powhatan Roof Garden's sky-high opening fiesta. Steve Le Sieur and his orchestra, favorites of last season, will again be on the bandstand. The Powhatan is Washington's only roof dance garden, and very handsome and airy it is. There's a new terrazzo dance floor. If Jupiter Pluvius acts up, the party will just adjourn to the air-cooled Cafe Caprice.

NEPTUNE EXPANDS: Comes a bulletin from Frank Romer saying that the Neptune Room is going to add some fancy rumba dancing to its entertainment this week-end, also that Johnny De Leon's Hawaiian Orchestra is to be enlarged. Pretty news!

TREMENDOUS PARTY: Exactly 945 of Washington's nicest people had a wonderful time at the opening of the Shoreham Terrace. Names of the prominent peoole present would fill a big book. Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Mrs. Woodring and Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim hurried back from their yachting trip just to attend the Terrace opening.

Gay and zestful is the current Terrace floor show, featuring Woods and Bray, Irene Wayne and a dancing "Ferdinand" who'd take a prize at any fair.

OSCAR CELEBRATES: Hi Hat is going to be jammed to the doors tomorrow night. For it's Oscar's annual anniversary party. There'll be a big cake (see pic above), souvenirs, noisemakers, balloons—everything that goes with a hotcha party. Congratulations, Oscar!

Advance news: There'll be a new Hawaiian Orchestra in Hi Hat come June 12.

LOTUS' SHOW CLICKS: The new "Summertime Revue" at Lotus registers 100 per cent from beginning to end. Jay Jayson's impressions of celebrities singing "Chloe" is the show's laugh hit. A "Minstrel Days" number with all the pretties in a Dockstader line-up and maestro Bill Strickland and the orchestra prancing around in trick hats, provides one of the season's flashiest finales.

RIVIERA FIESTA: The Lounge Riviera will hold its "summer opening party" on Friday. Maestro Pete Macias' vocal discovery, pretty little Catherine Fleming, of Eastern High School, will make her debut as Riviera's summer singer at the party, it's expected. Hotel 2400's Manager Fordyce C. Minnick is dressing up Riviera no end swankily for the summer. There'll be beach umbrellas, palm trees, pictures and sound effects of the surf. Why go to the seaside when Riviera's here?

LAMBETH SHAG: Bamboo Gardens' "Hollywoodettes" are swinging the demure Lambeth Walk right up to the ceiling. They shag, tapstep and truck the Lambeth something terrific. We can't imagine what Queen Elizabeth would say if she saw this Hollywoodized Lambeth. Lots of other lively acts, too.

SPANISH BALLROOM: One of the most attractive dancing places in these parts is Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom. Artistically lighted, big and airy, but protected from the weather, it is the home of a succession of "big name" bands specializing in the high temperature swing demanded by youthful dancers. Lawrence Welk's "Champagne Music" is the current attraction.

Peter Borras, head man and guiding genius of the Madrillon. If you don't know Pete Borras, you don't know your Washington.

Tom O'Donnell, owner of Griffith Farms Tavern and O'Donnell's sea food place. Busier than a hive of bees, but always has time to greet his customers.

Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of L'Escargot. A real Parisienne whose exquisite manners are appreciated by L'Escargot patrons.

Roberts Killed In Race Crash

The death of the popular Roberts marred the day. Tearing around the southern turn, he plowed into a wobbling car, driven by Swanson, who just had relieved Ralph Hepburn, of Los Angeles, as Hepburn stopped for gasoline and oil. Roberts' car careened off Swanson's machine and plowed through the outside board fence, coming to a stop in an adjoining golf course. The impact with the boards ripped and tore the flesh off Roberts' body. He was picked up unconscious and rushed to a hospital, dying within an hour.

Swanson Badly Burned

Swanson, who suffered burns about the head and shoulders after his car caught fire, was reported in a serious condition tonight, but with physicians hopeful of his recovery. Chet Millers' car struck the wreckage and plunged through an inner guard rail, but he was not injured seriously.

A flying piece of guard rail struck Miss Martha Ponelite, of Collinsville, Ill., a spectator, injuring her about the head and shoulders, and Mrs. Bruce Milliken, of Thornton, Ind., suffered a broken leg when she was struck by debris from the wreck.

By his victory Shaw won $20,000 as first prize plus $1,400 in lap prizes. Snyder got $10,000 plus $2,800 in lap prizes for finishing second. Myer, although out of the prize money entirely, won $2,500 in lap prizes.

Strong Spain Best Peace Guarantee, Declares Franco

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, May 30.—Gen. Franco expressed the desire before thousands of his nationalist followers today that Spain "be strong so she will be able to assure her peace."

"I want Spain to become a fortress, but I do not want her to become a fortress to plunge herself into any adventures," he asserted after 11,000 women Falangists (Fascists) in blue and red uniforms conducted a victory parade. The women marchers were viewed by 50,000 persons, including high officials, foreign representatives and the German, Italian, Portuguese and other envoys.

Army Asks Plane Makers To Share Work

'Farming Out' by Low Bidders Would Develop Industry

The Army hopes to spread its 3,000-plane expansion program over the entire aircraft industry by voluntary "farming out" of work by successful bidders, members of the House Military Appropriations subcommittee said yesterday.

Officials have testified, it was said, that if the Nation's capacity to produce military planes is to be increased to anything like that of the totalitarian states, most of the aircraft industry should participate in the plane program. Existing procurement law, however, requires that orders go to the low bidders in open competitions, which may mean that only five or six of the 19 large manufacturers will obtain contracts.

And while attempting to expand production capacity, the department also wants to expand research facilities to regain for America the lead it lost to the German Reich two years ago. Committeemen said the group would probably grant additional funds for this purpose.

The sub-committee, now holding hearings on a $307,000,000 supplemental Army appropriation bill, has received testimony that Germany is capable of producing a minimum of 20,000 military planes a year, members said. The United States can now produce only about 400 fighting planes a month, but hopes to raise this figure to at least 1,000 every 30 days by developing existing facilities.

The War Department first considered asking Congress to temporarily abandon competitive bidding in favor of negotiating contracts with the entire industry, but has dropped this scheme, it was stated. Instead, it is asking successful bidders to voluntarily give contracts to other plants for parts of planes.

In expanding research, the Army wants to compensate unsuccessful bidders in original design competitions for some of their development work. By this means, it was said, manufacturers failing in one competition can continue the development of their designs.

Additional research funds allowed to the Army might be paid to manufacturers in this way, spent at the Army's own experimental station at Wright Field, Ohio, or turned over to universities carrying on aviation experimental work, it was said.

In addition, Congress is expected to be asked again to establish another air research center at Sunnyvale, Calif. This project, however, comes under the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics rather than the War Department. NACA officials, strongly supported by the Army Air Corps and naval aviation, will seek to revive the $10,000,000 project when the third deficiency appropriation bill is taken up, it is said.

Mainly as the result of opposition of Virginia Congressmen, the proposed Sunnyvale establishment was defeated earlier in the session.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

We have taken the liberty of awarding 20 points for each of the five questions selected, so that you may grade yourselves. Eighty points is an excellent score

Question 1

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass

You, North, hold:

♠ A 10 5
♡ K 4
♢ J 8 3
♣ A J 10 9 8

What do you bid?

Question 2

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass

♣ A 7 3

What do you bid?

Answers

1. One no trump. The club suit, of course, is definitely rebiddable. On the other hand, you have a close-to-minimum bid and a hand balanced in pattern with a stopper or semi-stopper in every suit. Consequently, your rebid of one no trump paints a better picture of both the strength and distribution of your hand. Nothing can be seriously lost by failing to rebid clubs.

2. Four no trump. Your diamond rebid in response to partner's jump to two no trump did not show any particular strength—it merely showed rebiddable diamonds, and as far as your partner can tell, it might have been a desperate effort to warn against no trump. Actually, you have a very good hand with about two and one-half honor tricks and a very fine six-card suit, with which your partner undoubtedly has some sort of fit. Consequently, you invite the slam by raising three no trump to four. If your partner cannot go on, the hand should play with complete safety at a four no trump contract. And if he does wish to go on, he can do so by going on in no trump or by supporting diamonds.

3. Three no trump. Your two-diamond bid on the second round, although not a forced response, certainly was not a strong bid. It did show some values, but on the other hand it did not show particular interest in game. When your partner, nevertheless, can now go to two no trump, thereby implying some sort of diamond fit, you with your strong six-card suit, plus an outside queen, should put him at game. Your hand is too good to sign off by bidding three diamonds. If you held six diamonds to the king, queen, ten and no queen of spades, and then would bid one, two and three diamonds. The diamond ace instead of the king plus the spade queen easily makes the difference.

4. Two spades. This bid should be fairly obvious. The problem is included merely to show that we have no hard and fast rules in our bidding system. A game force can be made even with a void of partner's suit when one's own suit is strong enough and one has sufficient honor strength.

5. Double. The opponents on this bidding seem to be in hot water, and you haven't the faintest idea whether you and your partner have a game or not. Consequently, despite the fact that you have only the ace and two small clubs, a double of clubs seems to be in order. Your partner has heart strength over the heart bidder and you have a singleton in addition to your spade and diamond strength. If your partner doesn't like the two-club double, he can always take it out, and then you may find a game contract in diamonds, spades or no trump.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

WHAT CONGRESS may do in the closing weeks of this session toward bringing to the front various items of legislation bearing on Government employe welfare is a cause of concern to the several organizations which have been responsible for moving the bills to the points thus far advanced.

Of special interest is H. R. 960, the Ramspeck bill aimed at broadening the merit system by the inclusion into status of thousands of jobs now outside and extending classification to the field service.

"Hope seems bright for H. R. 960," comments the Government Standard, official organ of the American Federation of Government Employes; "even though it may not get through both houses at this session, for the reason that it is a part of the Administration's reorganization program, and in some respects the most important part of it."

And on the subject of retirement—which strikes home to every employe with civil service status, the same source observes: "It is regrettable that retirement legislation has failed so often and by such narrow margins.

"The record tends to discourage Government workers. But it appears now that each house may enact a retirement bill, and, for once, it may be possible to write some effective legislation in conference. At least, if different bills are enacted by the two houses and then sent to conference, the net effect at least will be to get the points at issue up for discussion before a relatively small group, with fair chances of a satisfactory agreement."

The Ramspeck bill—regarded as a device giving the Presiden't executive orders of June 24 the needed stretch in extending the merit system—has been popular with all the organizations representing Federal employes. All three of the major unions strongly recommend its passage.

But there is less unity in their remarks about one amendment to the bill which was added by the House Civil Service Committee. On this, the sedate Sociey for Personnel Administration comments in its publication: "The amendment provides that Government workers who fail non-competitive examinations when their agencies are being covered into civil service shall be dismissed from the service within six months. The United Federal Workers of America say that the amendment was due to a 'tactless remark' suggesting the provision made by President Charles I. Stengle, of the American Federation of Government Employes. U. F. W. A. opposes the amendment strongly."

TONIGHT, out-of-door minded Federal employes can go to the new Interior Auditorium and see a series of movies on the new camp for Uncle Sam's workers in the Catoctin Mountains. The plans for the camp will be discussed by A. J. S. Martin, the camp director; Matt Huppuch, fo the National Park Service, and Miss Irma Ringe, chairman of the Federal Camp Council.

A big crowd will go to the camp Sunday. They will hold a picnic, have sports and, at 2 p. m., inspect the camp. The site, in a beautiful setting, is 60 miles from Washington and near Thurmont, Md. There are signs along the road from Thurmont to guide visitors.

INNOVATION: New York World's Fair visitors have an opportunity to take a sample civil service examination and to watch it scored by the New York Municipal Civil Service Commission. The commission's exhibit includes automatic electric scoring machines used in rating examinations, and the machines used to test candidates in physical examinations.

Bob Burns Says—

Womenfolks nowadays have changed a lot since I was a boy. They hold men's jobs, wear men's clothes, hang around men's barrooms and try to think like a man. I don't mean anything slanderous, but sometimes I get to wishin' my wife would stop usin' my new electric razor . . . to peel those potatoes.

Even the 'teen age girls have minds of their own in this age. Last week Uncle Otha was bawlin' out his 17-year-old daughter, Hedy LaHink, for wearin' her skirts so short.

Hedy said, "Papa, please remember that I'm no longer a child. So I'll wear my skirts just as short as I please!"

Secrets in Love

Chapter XXIV

AFTERWARD Peg could never remember just how long she stood there, with shivers running down her spine. It would seem like one minute—and then again like endless, anxious hours—since Anthony and the six powerfully built policemen had tramped down the alley running alongside the hotel and into the shabby building.

Anthony had refused to let her accompany them. He had told her sternly: "I'm going to send Joan down here, Peg. She'll probably balk because she won't want to miss the fireworks. But you can never tell what might happen." Then he had gone and hours later—or minutes—Joan had come out the front entrance.

She came through the swinging door, hair flaming back from her ears and her brow. She looked, thought Peg, as if she were heading into a sou'wester.

What Joan Heard

"Anthony doesn't know the first thing about being a white man," Joan said furiously. "He wouldn't let me stay. But I got in on a little of it, anyhow. He started me down the steps, but the minute he turned around I raced back up again. I saw that blond floozie, Nadeja, when she opened the door. She looked like some one who had been sitting up six nights figuring out ways to end it all.

"When Tony and the cops went into that room and closed the door, I slipped down the hall and stood outside. I could hear some of the things they said. It seems they're arresting the Damaras on a housebreaking charge, that they're waiting now for an ambulance to take Dr. Damara to the hospital. Under guard, of course. Nadeja, however, goes to jail as an accomplice.

"What in the world is it all about, Peg? When it comes to figuring this out, I have a very low IQ, indeed. I'm completely stymied. But it seems I certainly started something when I followed that lug."

Peg said: "Anthony believes they are spies, Joan." Then she told her about Nadeja Damara's gold chatelaine, what had happened at Aunt Mehalie's earlier in the evening. "Imagine!" finished Peg in wondering amazement. "All that time you had the card!"

Joan's eyes widened. She clicked her small tongue against her teeth. "Well, I'm damned!" she gasped. "Isn't this something." And then, suddenly very grave: "Peg, do you think Duncan was mixed up in this business in any way that will get him into trouble?"

"I don't doubt Nadeja had some use for Duncan," Peg said thoughtfully. "But whatever it was, she probably failed. Mother used to say that our great-great-grandfather was a Vermonter and that the Yankee strain had lain dormant until Duncan was born. She believed firmly that Duncan was a throwback on that New England branch in every way. I'm quite sure Nadeja Damara, for all her influence over him, didn't use Duncan in any way. I don't know, of course, but I imagine Duncan stopped seeing her recently because he suspected something. Or maybe she gave him the air because she wasn't getting to first base. I——"

But Peg didn't go on. An ambulance siren shrieked through the night air. The long gray car flashed up to the hotel and careened sharply past Peg and Joan into the alley. A few seconds later, the Black Maria from the police department turned into the alley, too.

Joan grabbed Peg's arm. "Come on," she said excitedly. "I couldn't bear to miss the second act curtain."

Garage Mystery Cleared

Nor were they the only ones who had that bright idea. People began swarming off of the street and down into the narrow alley. By the time the internes had brought out the stretcher with a dark man swathed in sheeting the alley was jammed with the curious. Behind that lugubrious procession came Nadeja Damara, her face partially covered with the velvet hood of an evening patrol without aid, with the proud wrap. She moved into the police rigidity of a noblewoman stepping into a tumbrel.

Anthony came out last. When he saw Peg and Joan in the alley court, he pressed through the crowd, joined them and ran a protective arm through theirs.

As he began hurrying them out into the street, he said: "Well, I guess that's that. Now I'm going to put you two brats into a cab and send you home. I've got to get in touch with our Military Intelligence rightaway. They'll want to search that room and they'll want to study that card. They will also be very interested in something I saw in that room. A gray wig and cotton padding and a shabby black dress that obviously fitted over the padding. A straw hat, too; not the sort Nadeja Damara would wear unless, for some reason, she was trying to look like a very old woman."

Peg's heart began to thump. "Did—did it have a faded rose on it . . . sort of dripping off the brim? The hat, I mean."

Anthony looked at her sharply. "Yes," he said. "How did you know?"

Peg told him in a quick rush of words about the garage, every detail she could remember. Even the gold ring with the serpent coiling over the green stone.

"Good heavens," said Anthony. "Nadeja Damara was wearing a ring exactly like that tonight."

Peg experienced relief, and then amazement, that the garage mystery was at last solved. Then the thought skirted her mind that the hand of fate had been beckoning to her ever since the afternoon she had met Anthony at the auction. It seemed fantastic, but the Damaras had had an important part in changing the course of her life. Because of them—and because she had got mixed up inadvertently in their business of spying—she had seen Anthony in danger. In that one horrible moment of fear the revelation of her love for him had come to her.

How Spies Work

Joan, however, was still not convinced. "But it isn't all over," she persisted. "They've merely arrested those two on a felony charge. What about the spy angle?"

Joan said: "But spies in peacetime, Tony. What on earth do they do?"

"Plenty," said Anthony. "For example, spies know that even if the United States isn't actually at war, that if they don't send an expeditionary force as they did in '17, we'll still be a potent factor in the next war through the munitions and supplies we'll furnish.

"So you see, any possible enemy wants to know our sources of electric power to run munition factories; they want to know as much as possible about the factories themselves which might be quickly converted to the making of munitions; they have undoubtedly charted all railroad junctions through which munitions would flow so that they might be destroyed.

"They want to know the location of our chemical plants. Of course, it goes without saying that they are eternally active trying to ferret out our latest improvements in war machines and weapons."

They were at the curb then, and Anthony was whistling sharply through his teeth for a cab. When one slid up to them he helped Peg and Joan in and stood for a moment leaning against the door.

"You girls have done a nice piece of work for your country," he said. "If you'd been trained in espionage you couldn't have handled it better. It's the wildest, damnedest thing stumbling on a set-up like this and outwitting an experienced pair like the Damaras." He grinned at them. "And without trying, too! I expect the Damaras are fully convinced at this point that Peg is in the pay of the United States Government."

Then Anthony turned to the cab driver and gave Aunt Mehalie's address. He said, paternally: "Drive carefully, please. The streets are getting pretty skiddy with the snow freezing on the surface like this."

Has Peg Lost Anthony?

Peg sank back in the cab. She was being very careful not to show any excitement or any expectation. But she was thinking that as soon as this Damara business was finished up, Anthony would come back to Aunt Mehalie's, and, somehow, she would be able to make him understand what had happened to her tonight. He would walk in and look down deep in her eyes—and know. She said then, still holding her pose, even though it didn't stop the funny shaking of her knees: "Joan and I will be waiting for you, Anthony. You'll come back to the house later tonight, won't you? We'll want to hear everything."

Anthony said: "Sure." And then suddenly his expression changed. "Gads, I almost forgot! I promised to take Evangeline to the Chevy Chase Club tonight. I'd better give her a ring and tell her I'll be a little late. I'll see you gals tomorrow, however."

He turned then and hurried toward the hotel. Pressing her face against the cab window, Peg felt tears springing unexpectedly and frighteningly to the backs of her eyes. She took in everything about Anthony—the tall body, lean and graceful as a New England elm, the quick, anxious step, the tilt of his sandy head. Through her tears he seemed to disappear into a fog and mist that dimmed the very outline of her hopes. Fog and mist, she thought, were a part of human life, and love was its single highlight. But she had learned this too late, she knew now, for as she watched Anthony walking away from her the highlight seemed to fade, to go out.

Peg didn't try to fool herself. She faced this clearly, determinedly, with her mouth struggling against its trembling and her eyes fighting back that mist. Anthony was hurrying to telephone Evangeline Martin that he would be a little late tonight—he was hurrying with an anxiousness that love alone could inspire.

All Not Perfect In Soviet Army, Pole Avers

Purge Has Produced Disastrous Effect, Gen. Sikorski Says

By Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski.
(Former Polish Premier and Chief of Staff.)
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

Warsaw, May 30.—The figures of the Russian war potential are impressive: 77 infantry divisions, 32 cavalry divisions on a war footing, a standing army of 1,300,000 men with 6,000,000 trained reservists, 5,000 tanks in active service, 44 air brigades (airplanes) and 5 air brigades (seaplanes), over 5,000 planes in active service and as many in the rear, an immense wealth for raw materials and fuel, exploited by war industry, which is already highly developed.

Special mention should be made of the armored weapons. As early as 1930, the Red army had about 10,000 armored units, such as tanks, armored cars and motorcycles in addition to tractor and motor vehicles of all kinds.

At present the armored forces comprise three corps. Further, each division of fusiliers has its tank battalion and each calvary division its motorized regiment. Finally, the high command disposes of an independent regiment of tanks.

Although it must be admitted that all is not perfect, the crack maneuver units give the Russian armored forces great firing power of a mobility and rapidity which with good roads, as for instance, in East Prussia, would constitute an important factor in independent operation—a predominant element in modern warfare.

Another weighty point is the development of the Russia air forces, which now include four corps of heavy bombing planes, five brigades of ordinary bombers, seven brigades of pursuit planes, three brigades of attacking planes, four line brigades and other liaison and sanitary planes.

These figures, as already stated, are impressive, but what is the real value of the Red army? The purge applied to the Tukhachevsky-Gramarnik "gang of traitors," has produced a disastrous effect.

The officers' corps has always been deficient in Soviet Russia. In the middle and lower ranks, where Stalin's partisans always outnumbered Trotzky's, these disadvantages are not apparent.

The material is somewhat heterogeneous, but this is at present the case in all armies. The motorization has not been seconded by a corresponding increase of the means of communication.

But with all these defects it is fair to state that from the point of view of the defenses the Russian possibilities are almost unlimited. The offensive possibilities may also in certain cases constitute an important factor.

The real criterion is rather to be sought in the Changkufeng engagement last year, where the Russians disposed of two fusiler divisions, 200 cannon, about 150 tanks and 100 planes. According to the Japanese, the Russian units were tenacious and disciplined, their firing was exact and their mastery of the modern weapons revealed a good standard of training.

Divided by inner conflict, there are two possibilities for Soviet Russia: To adhere to the peace front, if national feeing prevails; or, in the event of a victory of bolshevism, to prefer neutrality for thend of an arbitration in the revolutionary sense.

All, therefore, depends upon what transformation may take place in Stalin's Soviet Russia. The greater the uprush of Russian national sentiment, the more chances there are that Soviet Russia will cast her whole weight into the scales for peace.

It is easy to understand that the possibility of a military convention by which Soviet Russia would adhere to the peace front awakens no enthusiasm in Germany. There are, it is true, numerous technicians who proclaim that thte Red army is absolutely worthless from a military point of view. Others, on the contrary, are convinced that it is of the greatest value. The truth lies exactly between the two extremes. It conforms fairly well to one of the main political postulates of the German chancellor, namely, to eliminate Soviet Russia at any rate from Europe.

Parents Hopeful for Safety of Transatlantic Flier

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

In their home in Clarksburg, W. Va., Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith sit by the radio in hopes of hearing of the safety of their son, Tommy Smith, 24-year-old pilot who tried to span the Atlantic in his "Baby Clipper." They heard about the flight just before take-off Sunday, but were unable to reach the flier with a plea that he abandon his plans. Smith is unreported

CAA May Bar Sneak Flights Across Oceans

Rules May Be Altered To Hold Factories and Ground Crews Liable

The one-chance-in-ten flight that Thomas H. Smith made in his 'Baby Clipper" to the still uncertain terminus has aroused the Civil Aeronautics Authority to contemplate provisions that might prevent other hazardous passages over the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The authority, an official disclosed, may drastically revise its regulations so that aircraft factories and ground mechanics would be held responsible to the authority for any collaboration with pilots who conceive hazardous flights.

The authority, this source state, it as the end of its patience with fliers who, for reasons of personal glory or for experiment, undertake flights with the chances obviously against them. Nothing is contributed to sound aviation knowledge by these practices, it was said.

"Safety Not Sensation"

"Because a few men made it, after careful preparation, a host of youngsters derive the idea that they can hop out over the water in jalopies," one aviation expert said.

New regulations possibly would aim at ground personnel who make such excursions possible by installing necessary equipment such as extra gasoline tanks. Besides surveillance of construction and improvement workers, the authority might fix stringent rules governing more completely the issuance of experimental certificates.

It was pointed out that the CAA officials had dedicated their administration of the airways to "Safety and Not Sensation." Chairman Robert H. Hinckley, of the CAA, had predicted the probable futility of the Smith "hop" Sunday. He said that Smith had one chance in 10 of success. "The law of averages is against such flights," he said.

Fear Series of Flights

CAA members would not say what disciplinary action, if any, will be taken against Smith should he make a reappearance. Previously, they had admitted that the nature of Smith's permit was not fully clarified with regard to possible penalties. They expressed hopes for his safety.

The mounting interest in aviation and the increasing availability of airplanes has made the authority fearful that a series of unprepared-for flights may be in the offing.

Berlin to Fete Germans Back From Spain

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 30.—German volunteers in the Spanish civil war, whose activities virtually were ignored at home for more than two years, were hailed by newspapers today as "examples for every German soldier" and bearers of "the great German army tradition."

Six thousand returning German fighters are to reach Hamburg from Virgo, Spain, tomorrow, and to be given a heroes' welcome by Field Marshal Goering.

The Berlin newspaper Lokalanzeiger said today German passenger airplanes were used from the very beginning of the Spanish conflict, July 18, 1936, to transport troops from Spanish Morocco to the mainland. Sometimes, the paper disclosed, one plane carried as many as 40 soldiers. A German legion was formed in October, 1936, it was said.

The paper related that German fliers in the campaign which resulted in the Nationalist capture of Barcelona on January 26, 1939, were "superhuman in their accomplishments" and "carried out tasks which until then, and even in the World War, were accepted as impossible of accomplishment."

It declared: "Germans fliers hunted Red enemies in the air and shot them to earth in flames, whether they were Russian, Red Spaniards, French or American, and then attacked them in their own hangars—once, for example, 23 of them who did not dare to take off."

Die Wehrmacht, an army publication, issued a special edition with pictures showing German soldiers in tanks, in planes, behind guns of various sizes and in almost every other phase of the war. It said that in attacks on Madrid in 1936 a German bombing squadron sometimes dropped between 30 and 40 tons of bombs in one flight.

There were no figures on the total number of Germans who participated in the war. As recently as two weeks ago a query at the propaganda ministry about Gen. Wolfram von Richthofen, commander of the German Condor Legion, brought from an official on duty there the answer: "I never heard of him."

Germans long have known that some of their soldiers fought in Spain, but not until today did they get an idea of the extent of that operation.

Presbyterians Oppose Arms For Aggressors

Assembly Condemns Anti-Semitic Campaign

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 30.—Shipment of munitions to aggressor nations and "the whispering campaign of anti-Semitism" were condemned today by the 151st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

The assembly urged passage of legislation forbidding shipment of arms and munitions "to any nation that crosses the territorial boundaries of another nation."

The church body also called for its ministers and congregations everywhere to exert their influence "against the whispering campaign of anti-Semitism and of hostility toward the unfortunate peoples who live under dictatorial governments."

The assembly also urged defense of civil liberties, "to see that no person or minority group shall be deprived of the freedom of speech, press, peaceable assembly and worship."

A report from the general council on the status of ministers who are "conscientious objectors" to war was called for, to be presented at the 1940 assembly. This year a proposal to recognize "conscientious objectors" received a majority vote, but lacked the necessary two-thirds.

Studies Merger of Churches

Montreat, N. C., May 30 (AP).—The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern) refused today to discontinue the movement for organic union with the Northern church.

Instead, it voted, after a lively debate, to submit to its 88 constituent Presbyteries the question of whether the permanent committee on co-operation and union should be abolished, as favored by opponents of union, or should be maintained for further study.

House to Pass Cash-Carry Bill, Bloom Says

Senators Talk of Filibuster to Save Old Neutrality Rule

Speedy House approval of the Administration's new neutrality bill, embracing authorization for munitions to be sold to any warring nation, was forecast last night by Acting Chariman Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York), of the foreign affairs committee.

"I haven't the slightest doubt that the Foreign Affairs Committee will approve the program proposed by Secretary of State Hull," Bloom said, as he issued a call for the committee to meet tomorrow for a showdown.

"We probably will not reach a final vote in committee until next week, after which the House will pass the bill," Bloom added.

Senate Filibuster Discussed

The Senate Foreign Relations committee will meet today and hear Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat, of Nevada, asfi that a date be set for votes on the various bills to tighten, repeal or modify the neutrality act.

Administration leaders privately predicted the Pittman bill, which closely follows the plan suggested by Secretary Hull, would be reported by a margin of one or two votes in the 23-man committee.

Policies Assailed

Representative Youngdahl (Republican), of Minnesota, in a radio address last night insisting on "minding our own business" internationally and holding that "America's peace policy should begin at home," declared:

"eDspite New Deal efforts to stir up hatreds and passions, to send the country into a frenzy of war hysteria, the United States is in no danger of attack from any foreign power.

"The danger to this country is that today, before any war is declared, America may be committed to a policy of participation in a foreign war.

"There is no doubt as to the New Deal neutrality policy. Its conception of neutrality is to give the breaks to the British and French, and to place all the obstacles possible in the path of others . . . Such a policy will come dangerously close to again sending American youth to die in Europe's mud."

Youngdahl spoke under the auspices of the National Committee to Keep America Out of War.

Archbishops' Plea Ignored by Hitler; Nazis Take Palace

By the Associated Press.

Salzburg, Germany, May 30.—The palace of Archbishop Sigismund Waitz of Salzburg, Catholic primate of Germany, was in possession of the Nazi Black Shirted elite guard tonight after an appeal directly to Reichsfuehrer Hitler had gone unheeded.

The archbishop asked the Fuehrer to rescind the seizure order, which deprived him of the use of his residence. Authorities seized the building yesterday while the archbishop was away. All the furnishings were removed and stored.

Archbishop Waitz was notified by authorities a month ago that he would have to leave the palace, which is state property, on the contention the S. S. troopers needed the building.

At that time he wrote to Hitler, asking him to countermand the order because, he said, Emperor Francis II of Austria had guaranteed the church "the privilege of using the palace and certain other properties in 1805.
